91st YEAR, No. 26 ★★★ VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, JULY 10, 1974 15 CENTS DAILY, 20 CENTS SATURDAY

50% LOSE DEPOSIT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nearly 50 per cent of the 110 federal candidates in British Columbia lost their $200 deposits Monday after failing to poll half as many votes as the winners in their ridings.

Among the 54 suffering $200 setbacks were 12 NDP candidates and one Liberal. All the Social Credit candidates, Communists, Marxist-Leninists and independents lost their deposits.

Throughout the country, the 16 candidates who ran for Communist or Marxist-Leninist parties all lost their deposits. It was the first time they ran as official party candidates.

Price Index Jump At 23-Year High

OTTAWA (CP) — A 1.3-per-cent increase during June in the consumer price index has pushed the index to its largest 12-month increase in 23 years, Statistics Canada reported today.

The June level was 11.4 per cent higher than it was in June, 1973. Not since the Korean War, when the index went up by 11.8 per cent between August, 1950, and August, 1951, has there been a larger 12-month increase.

Higher costs for food, transportation and housing accounted for a major share of the June increase.

During the last two months the consumer price index has gone up by three per cent as prices of food and petroleum products have climbed sharply higher.

In June the largest contributors to the gain in the index were higher prices for fresh produce, restaurant meals, fuel oil for homes and gasoline for cars.

Compared with a year ago, the largest price increases were for food. The index for restaurant meals was up by 20.7 per cent and for food eaten at home 16.7 per cent.

The next largest year-over-year changes were increases of 11.6 per cent in the private transportation index and 11.5 per cent in the household operation index. Both these index changes reflect higher costs for petroleum products.

Major price changes during June included an increase of more than nine per cent for fresh produce. The average price of restaurant meals went up by 2.1 per cent.

Fuel oil prices rose by an average 3.2 per cent in June and gasoline prices by 4.5 per cent.

The food index grew by 1.2 per cent in June and there was a similar increase in the housing index. The transportation index was up by 1.9 per cent.

The consumer price index is based on a 1967 survey of family spending patterns and weights of major component indexes are: Food, 25 per cent; housing, 31 per cent; clothing, 11 per cent; transportation, 15 per cent; and other items, 18 per cent.

The increase in produce price in June more than offset declines in prices of beef, pork and eggs. Sugar prices rose by an average 3.5 per cent and prices of many products containing sugar also went up.

Home ownership costs went up by 1.3 per cent as purchase prices, mortgage rates and repair costs were higher. Rents were 1.1 per cent higher.

Appliance prices were up by an average 2.3 per cent and furniture prices 1.2 per cent.

Aussies Strand Sinatra, 'Goon Squad'

SINATRA
. . . God-given?

SYDNEY (UPI) — A wave of union indignation at Frank Sinatra and his bodyguards, who manhandled two men and a woman reporter whom he called a $1.50 hooker, brought cancellation of his comeback tour today — then stranded him in Australia.

Sinatra was scheduled for a five-concert, $135,000-a-night tour but bowed to union pressure and cancelled his second performance in Australia after his guards beat up the two men and the woman in Melbourne.

Shortly after Sinatra blasted the press as a bunch of bums and women reporters as hookers and broads before a sellout audience of 6,200 at Melbourne's Festival Hall Tuesday, three unions told him to "pack his bags and get out of Australia."

They included the technicians who would have helped stage his performances.

Television cameramen David Hill and Mike Mchan and newswoman Hilary Sexton were cut about the face in a violent scuffle at Sinatra's Melbourne hotel when they tried to photograph him in a corridor. Jim Oram of The Daily Mirror said Sinatra's "goon squads" blocked the way and then attacked the newsmen.

The bruised newsmen said they were seeking legal advice on the incident.

The scuffle broke out after a previous incident at the concert hall where Sinatra made a 20-yard dash past newsmen with grunts of "get out of my way."

Transport union workers refused to load gas in Sinatra's private jet, the hotel workers union at the Southern Cross Hotel in Melbourne refused to serve food and drink in the suite he shared with Mrs. Barbara Marx, wife of Zeppo, of the Marx brothers, and his team of 17 friends, labelled by newspapers as "The Goon Squad".

Sinatra demanded today that the press apologise to him, but Jim North, secretary of the New South Wales division of the Australian Journalists Association, said:

"If Sinatra doesn't apologise to the media I will call on 114 affiliated unions and ask them to blackball Sinatra unless he apologizes for calling our women journalists whores."

Australians also were angered at Sinatra's easy way with customs. It takes an average of 30 minutes to get through customs but Sinantra did it the easy way when he through customs from Tokyo on a Qantas 747. He passed through in a matter of seconds and then raced into town at high speed in a white Rolls-Royce with little regard to the speed laws.

"Who the hell does this man Sinatra think he is?" asked Neville Wran, leader of the Labor Opposition in the New South Wales Parliament.

All But One Mill Closed

All but one of the pulp and paper mills on Vancouver Island were shut down today as spreading labor strife threatened to bring the forest products industry through most of B.C. to a halt.

About 1,000 men were off the job at the Crofton mill near Duncan and another 1,100 walked out at Harmac near Nanaimo. All told, about 6,400 mill workers are out at seven Island and coast mills.

The mill shutdowns — except at Port Alberni where about 1,200 men are still at work — brings two more unions along with the International Woodworkers of America into open conflict with the forest products companies.

They are the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada and the United paperworkers of Canada, both dissatisfied with proposed mid-contract wage revisions.

In Victoria, an all-night bargaining session involving Labor Minister Bill King failed to produce any agreement between the IWA and Forest Industrial Relations, bargaining agent for 120 companies.

Talks were expected to resume sometime later today but there was no indication of where or when.

In the IWA dispute over a new contract, half of 32,000 coast loggers and millworkers remain off the job, most of them on Vancouver Island. Major operations in Greater Victoria continue except Sooke Forest Products.

Among other pulp and paper mills shut today:

William's Mark-Up: $77,000

Nineteen months after he bought a house in Victoria's exclusive Rockland district for $60,000, Resources Minister Robert Williams has it on the market for $137,000.

Advertised by Block Bros. which has listed it since the end of June, the property at 1737 Rockland Avenue is described in the newspaper advertisement as "one of Victoria's official heritage homes" set in "large, secluded grounds."

The Rattenbury-designed home has five bedrooms, three bathrooms and seven fireplaces, the ad says, and a conservatory adjoins the "entertainment-sized living room."

In the garden there is the foundation for a tennis court, as well as an orchard. The lot is 97 by 300 feet.

The realtors adjure "no drive-bys" and give no indication of address or owner.

But the accompanying photograph shows the rear of premises at 1737 Rockland, which according to Land Registry records was bought by "Robert Arthur Williams, Minister of Lands and Forests, and Lea Marie Yvonne Williams, homemaker" Nov. 22, 1972 (about three months after the NDP came to power).

Purchase price is given as $60,000.

Williams was not available for comment on the matter today. Several months ago, he indicated he was planning to move to the Victoria West area where he and his family could enjoy more of a warm neighborhood atmosphere.

PCs, NDP Eye New Leaders

Times News Services

OTTAWA — As Progressive Conservative officials absorbed the shock of the federal election results, they hastened to deny that Robert Stanfield's leadership is in jeopardy.

But despite denials, the future leadership of both the Conservative and New Democratic parties is being discussed by party members.

Both Stanfield and David Lewis have refused to make snap decisions on whether to resign.

Stanfield said he would discuss the leadership issue with the party caucus and party officials. He indicated it would be some weeks, if not months, before he decided.

MP Stu Leggatt, one of the two NDP members who retained their seats, was mentioned as a possible successor Tuesday in a survey of opinions on Lewis' position.

Tommy Douglas, re-elected in Nanaimo, Cowichan and the Islands and the only other New Democratic MP left in B.C., proposed three candidates Tuesday to succeed David Lewis as federal party leader:

—Ed Broadbent, re-elected in Oshawa-Whitby, and currently chairman of the NDP caucus.

—Lorne Nystrom, re-elected in Saskatchewan's Yorkton-Melville riding.

Douglas, a former NDP federal leader himself, rejected a suggestion that he take over from Lewis as party leader until a convention can be held.

"Although we have been greatly reduced in numbers, we still have some outstanding young men to take over when Mr. Lewis decides what we wants to do," Douglas said.

Like several other New Democrat MPs and former MPs, he appeared to favor the leadership chances of Broadbent and ruled out the likelihood of Lewis either continuing much longer as leader or of Lewis seeking a seat in Parliament through a byelection.

His most probable option, Douglas said, is to ask the party caucus to elect a temporary House leader and then to call a leadership convention at a convenient time.

Meanwhile Stanfield slipped quietly into the capital Tuesday afternoon unnoticed by the public and virtually ignored by his own supporters.

Only a handful of officials from Conservative headquarters and Grenville-Carleton MP Walter Baker went to the airport to meet the leader on his return from his home riding in Halifax where he received the news of his resounding defeat at the polls Monday.

Community Centre Okayed for City

Victoria is among five centres in B.C. to receive government approval for the first combined community health and human resources centres.

The government said operating costs for the first year will total $1.5 to $2 million for all five programs.

The Victoria centre will be in James Bay and that program is already in the final stages of planning, ready for operation by the fall.

The other centres are being established in the Queen Charlotte Islands, Houston, Granisle and Grand Forks-Boundary.

The centres will provide for locally-planned, controlled and operated health and social service programs.

About 80 per cent of the costs are already funded by the province through existing programs which will be incorporated into the new centres, and capital costs will be the major new expense in the first year of operation.

Personnel and programs will be housed in existing or temporary facilities until new buildings are available.

SUMMER FESTIVAL OPENS TONIGHT

Rain or shine, the Victoria Summer Festival opens tonight.

The first of 34 open air concerts of popular symphonic, ballet and operatic music opens at 6 at the Provincial Museum's Heritage Court.

Featured throughout the season of sunset promenade programs will be Victoria Symphony Orchestra and guest artists conducted by Laszlo Gati.

Official opening ceremonies for the Victoria Summer Festival will be held at 7 p.m., followed by a second concert with a different program at 7:15.

If it rains the events will take place at the same times in Christ Church Cathedral on Quadra Street.

The concerts will continue through Aug. 9 on Monday, Wednesday and Friday in Heritage Court and will be accompanied by other special attractions.

Each evening at 8:30 there will be film showings in nearby Newcombe Auditorium. The films are strongly British Columbia oriented. Tonight visitors will see Island Eden and Mountains to the Sea.

There will also be a photographic exhibition in the Heritage Court complex, and in the Provincial Archives Building an art exhibition dealing with landscape.

Exhibitors are all from Vancouver Island and are headed by Royal Canadian Academicians Maxwell Bates, Don Harvey, Flemming Jorgensen and Herbert Siebner.

Others have in many cases received Canada Council grants, had one-man shows and exhibited in important shows across the country.

All events are free to the public.

It's Cats That Made 'Em Great!

by PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

What made the British navy great?

It wasn't its Nelsons or its ships of Oak.

It was the elderly spinsters and their love of cats.

This was one of the contentions Tuesday in Saanich cat lovers' running battle with council to quash what they consider unfair legislation against felines.

A delegation appeared before the finance, legislative and health committee, backed by a thick sheaf of eloquent letters, all protesting a section in a bylaw that authorizes poundkeepers to pick up any cat found wandering without its owner.

It was one of these letters that traced the history of the British navy.

Crediting the theory to evolutionist Charles Darwin, the writer described the cycle this way:

—Bumble bees were more abundant near towns and villages. This was because cats helped keep down the field mice, which eat honeycombs and larvae.

—It was the cats kept by spinsters in towns and villages that helped keep the field mice down.

—Because of this red clover prospered. The cattle fed on it. The navy fed on the cattle.

"It was, in fact, the British spinster who kept the navy great," the writer claimed.

Criticism from cat lovers at the last council meeting caused aldermen to table the legislation. It was tabled again Tuesday.

The cat lovers contend the legislation, if passed, would be illegal, contravening the Criminal Act which forbids any person from depriving another of a pet.

Mayor Ed Lum said the

LONDON (UPI)— A committee of the governing Labor Party today recommended government economic intervention in the press and abolition of the British Broadcasting Corp. and centralization of all broadcasting in a "public broadcasting commission."

U.S. 'Threatening'

CARACAS (UPI) — Panama accused the United States today of creating a "constant threat to peace and security" by holding on to the Panama Canal.

Cable Car Crash

TORONTO (CP) — Two women professors at the University of Toronto, Helen Floruk and Irena Bienkowski, were killed Tuesday in Bergen, Norway, when a cable car in which they were riding crashed down a mountainside.

CUSO Man Shot

Floods Kill 20

MORELIA, Mexico (UPI) — Authorities said today at least 20 persons died and hundreds were left homeless when torrential rains engulfed several villages in the Mexican state of Michoacan.

N-Test Shakes Nevada

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — A weapons related atomic device was detonated today at the Nevada test site, causing high buildings here 90 miles away to sway from what a CalTech seismology expert said was "a pretty good blast."

The Atomic Energy Commission would say only that the device was in the 20 to 200 kiloton range. CalTech said it measured 5.5 on the Richter scale.

The Soviet Union apparently also carried out an underground nuclear test explosion today, officials af the Norsar Seismological Observatory in Norway said.

Major Jump in Fastbus Use

Victorians will go on the buses if they can be assured a fast, regular service.

That seems to be indicated by B.C. Hydro figures showing a substantial increase in passengers carried since the transit system began its Gordon Head "fastbus" service last Feb. 22.

Hydro transit manager Dave Suttie said Tuesday the Gordon Head service had a 70 per cent boost in passenger volume in the four-month period March to June this year, compared with the same period in 1973.

Taking a closer comparison period, he said, the increase over the four months immediately preceding introduction of the faster service — November, 1973, to February, 1974 — was 41 per cent.

Suttie was careful not to draw any real conclusions from the figures, noting that not all the increase can be attributed to the improved service because Gordon Head is an area seeing "tremendous growth."

There are other factors to be taken into account, including the higher-than-average proportion of senior citizens in the population he said.

"We would like to think that people are being wooed away from their cars but it's much too early to tell," he added.

The Hydro official commented, however, that there is "real significance" in the system-wide passenger increase of 16 per cent, comparing the 12 months just ended with the previous 12-month period.

"This is a pretty high increase for any transit system anywhere in Canadda," he said. "We like to think we are doing this by offering a better service."

The Gordon Head service runs at 15-minute intervals throughout the day and has only limited stops. The Douglas-Yates stop is the regular downtown terminal, but in peak hours the route is extended to the legislative precinct to cater to office workers.

Teachers To Boycott Pay Talks

None of the three Victoria area teachers' associations will attend a salary bargaining meeting Friday in Vancouver called by the B.C. School Trustees Association last week.

"There's no way we're going to dash over to Vancouver," said Jim London, former president of the Sooke Teachers' Association.

Sooke, Saanich and Greater Victoria school boards are among 68 in B.C. which have appointed the BCSTA their bargaining agent this year, in an attempt to bring about province-wide teachers' salary bargaining.

The B.C. Teachers' Federation and its member teacher associations strongly oppose any move from district-wide to province-wide bargaining.

London said he thought the BCSTA's move in calling Eridays' meeting was an attempt to break down the bargaining system.

If representatives from all 68 teachers' associations did show up, how could the BCSTA bargaining team deal with all of them, he asked.

Mavis De Girolamo, president of Greater Victoria Teachers' Association, said her association is prepared to meet the BCSTA team, but in Victoria instead of Vancouver.

John Costa, agreements chairman for Saanich teachers, said the meeting is a "thinly disguised attempt" to force province-wide bargaining on the teachers.

Special Meeting On ICBC Called

A special cabinet meeting was called this morning to discuss the future of the Insurance Corporation of B.C.

"Wer'e taking a look at our whole program," said Health Minister and ICBC director Dennis Cocke, as he entered the meeting. "Naturally we've had to make some changes in regards to Premier Barrett's remarks."

The last major statement on ICBC by the premier was made in Prince George recently when he said the government would be taking a second look at the separate $10 driver certificate insurance.

Cocke said, however, the outcome of today's meeting will not have any bearing on the July 15 deadline for driver certificates.

Norman Borthnick, general manager of ICBC, attended the meeting, and Cocke said similar discussions are going on "at the board level of ICBC."

Transport Minister Bob Strachan, the minister in charge of Autoplan and ICBC, rushed into the meeting without answering reporters' questions, but said he doubted any announcement would be made later.

Cocke said the point of the cabinet-level discussion is to bring about the benefits to the people of B.C. that they should acerue from ICBC.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly, who presided over the meeting since the preimier is on holiday, said only that the special session was called "to talk about a few things."

Ottawa May Act Soon To End Clothing Tax

OTTAWA (CP) — The 12-percent federal sales tax on clothing and shoes is expected to be removed even before the government presents a new budget to Parliament, finance department sources said today.

The tax cut was one measure in the government's May 6 budget, which was later defeated in the Commons in the vote that brought on the July 8 election.

Sources said the delay in removal of the tax has caused gross distortion in the industry as manufacturers hold shipments until the tax cut takes effect.

The tax could be removed by cabinet order, later to be approved by Parliament as an item in the new budget.

Finance Minister John Turner and Prime Minister Trudeau said during the election campaign that their defeated budget would be re-introduced if the Liberals won the election.

But on election night Monday, Turner appeared to soften that commitment in the case of tax proposals for mining and oil companies.

The May 6 budget proposed discontinuing the tax deduction resource companies get to reflect the royalties they pay provinces.

Trudeau has not announced when the newly-elected Commons will be summoned, but it could be in August. Neither has he announced whether Turner or other ministers will retain their present portfolios.

But he has made it clear throughout the campaign that the government remained committed to its May 6 budget proposals.

Elks Pact Denied

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall denied reports today that Elk lodges throught the province would be the main organization authorized to distribute Western Canada lottery tickets in B.C.

"Any non-profit society in the province may apply for selling agency status to help raise funds for their activities," said Hall, "but the applications must be sent to the B.C. Lotteries Branch, Legislative Buildings.

Hall said the Elks application for selling status has not yet been approved.

The lotteries branch is the only organization authorized to grant permission to sell tickets.

Tickets for the first Western Canada lottery go on sale July 15 and will give ticket holders a chance at $750,000 in prizes in the Oct. 23 draw. First prize will be $250,000 and tickets will cost $2.50.

Canadian Plant Chosen

LONDON (CP) — The government has decided that Britain should press on with its own heavy-water nuclear reactor system rather than adopt a U.S. system. Britain and Canada would co-operate in the British development.

Energy Minister Eric Varley said in the Commons today that "both the British and Canadian governments see great advantage in full co-operation on heavy-water pressure-tube systems."

He added that "United Kingdom nuclear organizations and the electricity boards will start discussing co-operation with their Canadian counterparts immediately."

The decision against adoption of the U.S. light-water system will come as a relief to Canadian authorities who have been pressing hard for greater Anglo-Canadian collaboration in this field.

The MacMillan Bloedel mill at Powell River, where 2,000 men are out after mechanics failed to show up for work this morning.

The Crown Zellerbach mill at Campbell River, affecting about 900 men, and the Tahsis Co. mill at Gold River, where 350 are out.

Elsewhere in the province, two of Prince George's three mills, the Intercontinental mill and the Prince George pulp and paper mill, were closed by a walkout by PPWC members.

A union spokesman said the men left work because they don't want a settlement similar to the contract being negotiated for coast IWA members where there are split pay scales.

In the overnight meeting between IWA negotiators and representatives for FIR, union president Jack Munro said no significant progress was made. It broke up about 5 a.m.

"We're going to have a sleep, then get back at it sometime later on today," he said.

Munro said no more money was offered, and the possibility of holding another vote was not even discussed.

"We're trying to find some way to improve the package," he said.

The IWA's 32,000 coastal members last week rejected a tentative settlement which had been recommended by union negotiators by just 275 votes.

Don Lanskail, president of FIR, said he had no comment following the talks, but said he expected they would resume later today.

Lanskail, who is also president of the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, said late Tuesday night that the entire pulp and paper industry in B.C., which employs 12,000 persons at 22 mills, could be shut down by the IWA contract dispute and the pulp tradesmen's dispute.

Lanskail said both disputes "are all part of the same ball of wax" and added that "the whole thing could be going down."

The pulp dispute centres around mid-contract re-negotiation of tradesmen's pay rates. Pulp union contracts don't expire until June 30, 1975, but unions say that the traditional difference of rates paid to them and to IWA tradesmen has been eliminated.

The pulp unions want the differential maintained in their favor between their part of the forest industry and the woodworking section.

Pulp union mechanics now earn $6.94 an hour compared with the majority of IWA tradesmen who earn $7.28 an hour. Top-rated IWA tradesmen earn $7.50½ an hour and pulp unions are seeking this rate.

The Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, representing the pulp companies, has asked for an industrial inquiry commissioner to investigate the dispute.

Cats

municipal solicitors had advised him municipal laws would rank over civil law, in this instance.

"The only way to prove this could be in the courts," Lum said.

The cat lovers stood firm. They still contended the law would be illegal. They argued, because of their nature, cats could not be confined to backyards but must follow their instinct to roam.

"You suggest we give cats privileges humans don't have," Ald. Les Passmore told them. "They can go anywhere, do what they want, be unmolested whatever they do."

Ald. Fred Severson asked, "Why should we discriminate against dog lovers?" He suggested cats be licensed.

He was told cats could not wear licence tags, because they would snag them in trees. Tattooing was the only solution the committee was told.

Mayor Lum was sure the municipality would be happy to hand over the whole to the Greater Victoria Animals' Crusaders if they would accept it.

"Cats cause us many more problems than dogs," he said. "We get many more complaints about cats."

Spokesman Maggi Lynn said the GVAC had no facilities. She suggested a lost and found registry and a low-cost spaying and neutering clinic would help solve the problem.

The next round of the cat issue is scheduled for the committee's next meeting. Meanwhile, members will review the situation, seek legal advice and ponder on how and whether cats should be licensed.

The housing index was 8.8 per cent above the level of a year ago. This includes both basic shelter costs and household operation costs and the 11.5-percent gain in the household operation index was partly offset by a gain of 7.1 per cent in the shelter component. This was one of the lowest year-over-year increases among components of the all-items index.

The June increase in gasoline prices brought them to a level more than 25 per cent above a year ago. Another factor in the June increase in the transportation index was a 1.6-percent average increase in car prices.

The clothing index was up by one per cent in June and was 10.1 per cent above the level of a year ago. More than half the June increase was attributed to a 5.2-per-cent increases in costs for laundry, dry cleaning and shoe repairs.

Higher prices for drugs and soap were the major factors in a six-tenths of one per cent advance in June in the health and personal care index. This index was 8.3 per cent above the June, 1973 level.

The recreation and reading index was up 1.5 per cent in June. Increases in prices for phonograph records and higher fees for driving lessons were major influences. The index was nine per cent above the level of a year ago.

Cigarette prices increased slightly during June and the tobacco and alcohol index was up five-tenths of one per cent. The index was 5.2 per cent above the June, 1973 level and among major components of the allitems index it had the smallest year-over-year change.

BEST MAN IS GROOM —IF HE SURVIVES

LAGOS, Nigeria (UPI) — Police reported Tuesday the death of 17 guests at a wedding party in the northeast Nigeria where tribal rites call for suitors to engage in physical combat for the bride.

Police said they did not know how many suitors competed for the bride last weekend, but the practice of the Fulani tribe is that they first demonstrate their endurance by undergoing a whipping, followed with violence at close quarters.

The winner gets the bride.

City Youth Loses In Bowling Final

SEATTLE — Dave Okano of Rock Springs, Wyo., nipped Cal Young of Victoria by four pins in handicap to advance to the all-American Youth Bowling tenpin championships July 20 and 21 in Dallas. Okano and Young had tied 157-157 in the match-play final of the regional tournament.

the weather

There were some breaks in the cloud cover in the interior this morning but rain was fairly general overnight in coastal regions. The southwesterly flow of air which has brought all the cloud and rain is beginning very slowly to change to westerly. As it does so there will be some drying over the province. Showers will continue but will be less frequent Thursday and there will be a bit more sunshine. Temperatures, however will remain on the cool side.

Vigilante Army for Israel?

Times News Services

TEL AVIV — Israel militants are trying to recruit a 10,000-man vigilante group with its own air force to launch raids aimed at wiping out Palestinian guerrillas in southern Lebanon.

The vigilante movement's founder — a young veteran of last year's Middle East war — is identified only as Lt. Eytan. He said 350 answered a newspaper advertisement and pamphlet appeals to join his "July Unit."

A spokesman said today they hope to recruit a force of 10,000 under the command of Maj.-Gen. Ariel Sharon, a hero of last year's October war, and are still waiting to hear from Sharon, now a member of the Knesset, Israel's parliament.

However, Sharon told reporters he considers the plan "nonsense."

Eytan said: "There must be 10,000 men out of a population of three million who would volunteer to secure the safety of our children."

The name July Unit is an acronym for Hebrew words meaning "over my dead body."

Defence Minister Shimon Peres told the cabinet the government would oppose the establishment of a vigilante group.

Eytan said he was seeking cheap Soviet-made warplanes for air strikes against guerrilla bases, but did not reveal how the craft could be obtained or brought to Israel.

Israeli navy commandos raided three Lebanese ports Monday and sank 30 fishing boats. The government said the raids were aimed at foiling guerrilla plans to launch an attack against Israel from the Mediterranean Sea.

Information Minister Aharon Yariv said the commando assault was also designed to warn Lebanese civilians not to aid the guerrillas.

Yariv said, however, the government has backed away from its former policy of massive retaliation attacks against Lebanon, fearing other Arab states would intervene and possibly trigger a new war in the region.

'Stonewall It' Nixon Ordered

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — "I want you all to stonewall it . . . plead the fifth amendment, cover up or anything else, if it'll save it, save the plan," President Nixon told his top associates during a March 22, 1973, discussion of their testimony before the Senate Watergate committee.

In a previously unreleased transcript from White House tapes, Nixon had described "the plan," minutes earlier, as "the cover-up plan."

The House judiciary committee Tuesday released its own version of 8 of the 31 taped conversations between Nixon and his aides which had been released in transcript form by the White House in April.

The committee transcripts include expletives, phrases and an entire lengthy section of the March 22 meeting which are not found in the White House transcripts.

Nixon's press secretary, Ronald Ziegler, charged the committee is dribbling out selected information in a "hyped P.R. campaign" against the president.

Roughly, the second half of the March 22, 1973, meeting Nixon had with John Dean and former Attorney-General John Mitchell, was omitted from the White House transcript, but is contained in the committee's.

"I don't give a shit what happens.

"I want you all to stonewall it, let them plead the fifth amendment, cover up or anything else, if it'll save it save the plan. That's the whole point."

The committee's transcript also appears to provide the most damaging version yet made public of Nixon's attitude toward the payment of "hush money" to Watergate conspirator Howard Hunt.

The committee transcript shows Nixon as more of an advocate of making the payment to Hunt.

The judiciary committee transcript shows Nixon, when discussing the possibility of meeting Hunt's demand for money, as saying, ". . . his price is pretty high, but at least, uh, we should, we should buy the time on that, uh, as I pointed out to John."

In the White House version of the same conversation, Nixon was quoted as saying ". . . his price is pretty high, but at least we can buy the time on that. . ."

At another point, the judiciary committee transcript shows Nixon returning the discussion to the subject of the money: "But let's now come back to the money, a million dollars, and so forth and so on. Let me say that I think you could get that in cash, and I know money is hard, but there are ways."

The White House transcript quoted Nixon as saying, "I just have a feeling on it. Well, it sounds like a lot of money, a million dollars. Let my (sic) say that I think we could get that. I know money is hard to raise."

In discussing the appearance of his aides before the federal grand jury investigating the Watergate affair, the White House version quoted Nixon as advising, "But you can say I don't remember."

In the judiciary committee version, Nixon gives a direction: "Just be damned sure you say I don't remember."

TOO MANY PRICE CHANGES

EDMONTON (CP) — Changing liquor prices are getting the better of the Alberta Liquor Control Board.

The board, in trying to cope with the fluctuating prices, has scrapped its annual customer price list in favor of loose price sheets, stapled together, which can be changed as often as necessary.

The price changes are neither unusual nor spectacular and are generally confined to "nickel and dime" changes, Peter Elliott, board chairman, said Tuesday. He added the fluctuations, which depend on such factors as currency rates, overseas and local freight rates, have been going on for some time.

Ulster Internees Freed

LONDON (UPI) — The government Tuesday announced it is beginning at once the phased release of the 627 political prisoners currently interned without trial in Northern Ireland.

Northern Ireland Secretary Merlyn Rees told Parliament the first group of seven was released Tuesday.

"Nothing would transform the security situation more quickly than determination by the community to support the police and to co-operate in this," Rees said.

But the IRA rejected the plan.

Seamus Loughran of the Provisional Sinn Fein, the IRA's political arm, said the guerrilla movement still demands an end, "completely and totally, to internment without trial."

Spokesmen for two Protestant paramilitary groups, the Ulster Defence Association and the Ulster Volunteer Force, also said all internees should be freed immediately.

Phone Workers Win Case

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Federation of Telephone Workers has won its case in a dispute with the B.C. Telephone company which sparked a province-wide walkout of 9,000 employees last month.

Arbitrator H. E. Hutcheon, a B.C. Supreme Court justice, handed down a binding report Tuesday upholding the union's contention that employees training new staff should be classified in a separate job category at a higher rate of pay.

Both sides accepted Mr. Justice Hutcheon as arbitrator June 28 after he offered his services at the opening of a hearing to consider B.C. Tel's application for a court injunction during the second day of the walkout. He submitted the report in his role as arbitrator rather than as a Supreme Court justice.

The employees then went back to work.

The wildcat walkout began after B.C. Tel suspended an employee who refused to train workers in the company's phone service centre without moving to a higher pay scale.

The company claimed the task involved only familiarization.

The reclassification involves a higher rate of approximately $6 a day.

Union president Bob Donnelly said the arbitration decision vindicates the federation's position.

"It shows that arbitration was not necessary in the first place. We feel rather regretful we had to take the action we did, but unfortunately it was necessary to make the company realize they can't get away with their kind of games," said Donnelly.

MDs Vow Walkout

HULL, England (Reuter) — British doctors announced today a three-stage plan of sanctions that may culminate in mass walkouts from the national health service if the government does not meet their demands.

The plan was disclosed at the annual meeting of the British Medical Association (BMA).

The BMA is demanding a 16-per cent increase in the $7.5 billion now budgeted annually for the health service. The doctors also want the right to treat private patients in state hospitals, and pay increases for all medical staff.

The BMA council chairman, Walpole Lewis, said the doctors are not threatening a strike. Phase 1 of the sanctions plan called for "non-co-operation." Under this, doctors would refuse tasks such as providing illness certificates to patients.

Phase 2 would restrict hospital duties to the bare contract minimum. Phase 3 would be a walkout and a return to the private practice of medicine.

House of All Sorts

It was significant that one of the first things to which Mr. Trudeau referred in his victory speech Monday night was the unevenness of the Liberal representation across the country. He noted the scarcity of colleagues in the three prairie provinces and felt it necessary to promise that "we will do our best to see that our policies apply fairly to them. We intend to be a government of all the people."

That tendency to gaps in the political spectrum is a fact of Canadian life which must be kept in mind by any leader. With only five Liberal members of Parliament in the three prairie provinces and eight more in British Columbia, western Canada can claim less than ten per cent of the national government's voice.

In addition to the need for more Liberal spokesmen from the West in order to present the problems and the opinions of so large a part of the country, there is a problem of appointing cabinet ministers to take part in the inner government of the nation. The Maritimes and Newfoundland, comprising fewer people, less geography and less wealth, were able to send the same number of Liberals to Ottawa as all of Canada west of Ontario.

The same problem unfortunately applies to the Conservatives. While the Liberals are without a single seat in Conservative Alberta, for instance, the Conservatives have only three seats in Quebec's massive bloc of 74. The shortage in this case is even more serious, for if the Conservatives were to form a government under such circumstances they would lack virtually any representation from French Canada, and find it very difficult to give the Quebecois a voice in the cabinet.

Likewise, the NDP are excluded from Alberta, Quebec, Newfoundland, New Brunswick and P.E.I. and have only one member in Nova Scotia. Such fragmented distributions of the major parties pose special problems for any party that gains power in Canada, and calls for special attention by any national administration.

A government, of course, may make the natural answer that if any section of the country wishes to carry weight at Ottawa it should elect more government members. But that evades the real question, which is that, as Mr. Trudeau says, the national administration should be a government of all the people regardless of their votes on election day.

The situation becomes particularly vexatious when the reason for a complete rejection of a party by a whole province — as in the case of Quebec and the Conservatives — goes back into ancient history which should have been passed over by the years. The treatment of the rebel Riel by a Conservative government, and the Conservative support of conscription in the First Great War, should not be reaching into the last third of the twentieth century to affect Canadian political fortunes. Yet so it is.

The Conservatives should face the hard fact of French-Canadian antipathy and devote full time to overcoming it, not only for the benefit of their party but for the advantage of Canada as a whole. Similarly the Liberals should recognize the western political situation as a pressing problem, not only of party advantage but of nationhood, and seek a lasting solution.

Geography makes Canada a difficult enough country to govern, quite apart from the variables of race, religion and language. We should not permit regional political barriers to add further to the complications.

Anachronistic Brinkmanship

Although both nations use modern electronic gear in their whale hunts, Russia and Japan, the only two nations which still maintain large whaling fleets, seem to present a 19th century image in carrying on this industry. The day of commercial whaling surely is past, the need for whale products long ago superseded by modern alternatives and improvements. But the slaughter of the world's largest mammals goes on and some species have been brought close to extinction.

It is encouraging, then, to note that the International Whaling Commission, embracing 15 nations, has cut this year's permissible harvest of fin whales by 45 per cent. The move is seen as a step toward a total ban on the commercial killing of this species. This could come as soon as 1976. The allowable slaughter of sei whales was also reduced, but the quota of sperm whales was not altered and that for minke whales was actually increased. It seems that each species is allowed to survive near the extinction limit and temporarily spared only when man's rapacity seems likely to eliminate it entirely.

For the last three years the United States, to its credit, has sought international agreement to place a 10-year moratorium on all whaling, in order to give the planet's whale population a chance to recover to readily viable proportions. Japan and Russia, however, have succeeded in stalling this measure each year.

Blue, gray, humpback and right whales are already safeguarded against killing, but only because their numbers had dwindled under the onslaught of the hunters. There is hope, then, that with care the population of fin whales may be built up again. But the whole whaling industry is due for another look by modern nations, so that these great creatures can be removed from the annual threat of extinction — and man can be removed from the threat of being responsible for an irreversible crime against nature.

MAURICE WESTERN

After Stanfield: Stanfield?

OTTAWA — It seems to me that the Conservatives, if they are wise, will be in no great hurry to seek a replacement for Robert Stanfield as national leader.

Although Mr. Stanfield, who has never encouraged his supporters to look on him as the indispensable man, may be ready enough to open the door to a successor, the party appears far from ready for a change of leaders.

For some commentators on election night the baseball rule of three strikes and out seemed to settle the matter. But politics are much more complicated, even if one ignores the interesting precedent of Robert Borden — also an uncharismatic Nova Scotian — who lost three elections and went on to become a great prime minister.

The patience of earlier days has not, of course, distinguished the modern Conservative Party. It is arguable too that in contemporary conditions a leadership convention at a comparatively early date would be the sound political course. But there are also some rather strong arguments against it in the present state of the party.

From where is a new conservative leader to come? There seemed to be a good prospect in 1972 that Mr. Stanfield would become the first former provincial premier to achieve national power. With his failure in 1974 the unbroken tradition of Canadian politics may now be a more serious obstacle.

Suffered Federally

In any case the Conservatives achieved their expectations in only one of the four provinces in which they are dominant. There is in fact a considerable feeling that Mr. Stanfield suffered federally from the unpopularity of the Davis government in Ontario.

Certainly this cannot be said of Alberta. But Peter Lougheed, although obviously attractive in the West, would face great difficulties in the central provinces. The Conservative weakness is in Ontario and Quebec. How would he be sold to voters there when the Liberals have worked so hard to identify him with the oil interests from which consumers must be saved?

Assuming, for the present at least, that the provincial premiers are out of the running, what of Mr. Stanfield's opponents in the 1967 contest? Some are deceased or out of politics. Of the others, George Hees will be 68 if an election comes four years from now. Duff Roblin, long regarded as a potential successor, is three years younger than Mr. Stanfield but he has twice been defeated in the federal field and is without a seat in Parliament.

Alvin Hamilton made a good run at the last convention: he is still the idea man of his party. He is courageous and loyal — although he comes from the prairie wing of the party; he had no part in the intrigues against his leader. But Mr. Hamilton would also be at a disadvantage since he is two years older than Mr. Stanfield.

In other words, it is as difficult to discern an heir apparent among the contenders of 1967 as it is among the provincial Conservative premiers.

Despite Monday's reverse, the Conservatives remain numerically strong in Parliament. It is possible that the caucus will provide the new leader. Of the 95 elected, however, a number are veterans who can be ruled out as contenders while

ROBERT STANFIELD
. . . no successors

There remain some bright young men recruited in the Stanfield years and it may be that one of these carries a field marshal's baton in his political knapsack. After all, forecasting in such a field is difficult; few surely would have recognized a future prime minister in the Pierre Elliott Trudeau of the mid-60s.

In general, however, the well regarded newcomers, such as Joe Clark, Jim Balfour, Sinclair Stevens, John Fraser and the others, remain relatively untested. James Gillies, although a competent financial critic, has yet to show that he could command a party and Claude Wagner, the only possible French Canadian claimant, has been up to this time amiably ineffective in Parliament.

To sum up, the caucus can certainly provide a supporting cast. But who are they to support? That is the Conservative problem.

It has occasionally happened that the Conservatives have gone beyond Parliament and the premiers to find a leader: as, for example, in the case of Sir John Thompson who came down from the bench and might, but for his untimely death, have rallied the party. Such a possibility cannot be excluded.

But in the meantime, someone must lead the Opposition in Parliament. In many ways Robert Stanfield is the best parliamentary performer in the group. Also, the developing situation may yet provide him with opportunities for very effective criticism.

The government once again has a majority but it will not preside over an easy situation. There were, in fact, Liberals who consoled themselves when defeat seemed possible with the thought that the 1974 election might be a very good one to lose.

Economic Judgment

In effect, Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Stanfield submitted an issue of economic judgment and approaches for political decision. The prime minister was persuasive enough to win the decision. But it does not necessarily follow that Mr. Stanfield was wrong either in his estimate of the damage likely to result from inflation or in his view that it cannot be successfully dealt with by existing policies.

If Mr. Stanfield was right at least in principle, the government may find itself in great difficulties. The danger is not only that inflation may continue unchecked but that it may also bring other problems in its train, including the corrective depression that some fear. In that event, the government, even if it changes course, as it might have to do, would be vulnerable to a Conservative attack and particularly vulnerable to a Stanfield attack. This is the advantage of an issue and the disadvantage of "me-tooism"; if one is right, there is always the possibility of another day.

It may, despite appearances, be premature to write off Robert Stanfield on the morrow of the battle. The sheer lack of obvious successors is likely to impose some delay on the Conservatives, whatever their post-election inclinations. But a year or two could alter matters because politics does not stand still. If our affairs prosper under the Trudeau government, a Conservative leadership change seems certain. But if good fortune is not the lot of the government and if the Conservative talent hunt is not particularly successful, it is by no means impossible that Robert Stanfield, despite all his disappointments, may yet loom as the most promising successor to Robert Stanfield.

WILLIAM R. FRYE

The Detente Balancing Act

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — There is little point in exploring ad nauseam whether the 1974 Nixon-Brezhnev summit was or was not a success. The answer depends very largely on one's definition of the word "success."

What is useful is to study the state of Soviet-American relations at this point in mid-1974, following the Moscow summit. How much substance is there to detente?

The arms race. Moscow and Washington have stated, once again, that they are serious about curbing the nuclear spiral. They have outlined an approach to this goal.

But what they have done has been more verbal than actual. It has consisted largely of agreements in principle and the scrapping of programs which neither wanted to carry forward in any case.

A hope of future gains is something. That hope has been kept alive.

Co-operation Unlikely

The Middle East. Authentic Soviet-American co-operation to pacify Israel and the Arabs, including the Palestinians, is unlikely. But perhaps the Kremlin will continue to withhold an overt monkey wrench; and if so, American diplomacy in that part of the world will continue to have useful elbow room.

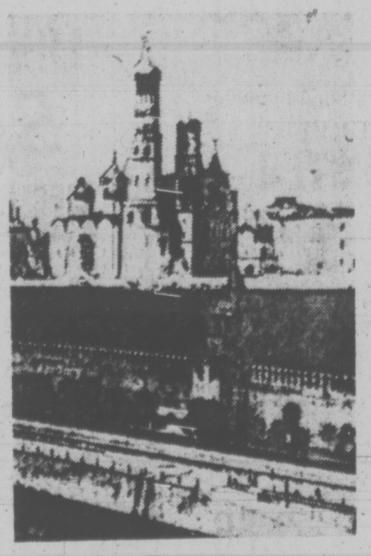
It is not an inconsiderable by-product of detente that American influence in the Mideast has been allowed to grow without serious Soviet challenge. Perhaps there has been nothing effective Moscow could have done about it; but to take this for granted would be to downgrade Russia's capacity for troublemaking — a capacity which has rarely been wanting elsewhere.

Europe. Here there is little agreement, even on the surface. The West had hoped that, as a result of ending the cold war, Soviet power and influence would recede from Eastern Europe and communism would be liberalized, even (and especially) in the Soviet Union itself.

The opposite has been happening. Soviet influence has been projected westward, not withdrawn eastward. It is Western Europe which is in danger of being Finlandized, not Eastern Europe. Except in the field of emigration, communism has hardened, not eased, its grip on people.

Europe's future is still under negotiation in Geneva and at Vienna. But prospects do not seem bright.

Economics. Trade, loans, technology and other means by which the Soviet



Kremlin Wants Aid

Union hopes to benefit from the achievements of capitalism are being made available — in a trickle: just enough to keep Moscow reaching, but not enough to satisfy the demand.

It is a skillful western bargaining tactic, but a frustrating one for the Kremlin because the West has not agreed on what it wants in return for a full and free flow. The Kremlin wants aid, but cannot buy because it does not know what the aid is going to cost.

Atmospherics. By conscious effort, the tone and atmosphere of Soviet-American relations have been kept good. Each side has co-operated to that end. Both have wanted an appearance of good relations, even though the substance may remain elusive.

This has had the practical effect of muffling domestic opposition, of strengthening advocates of detente (notably President Nixon and Secretary Brezhnev), and of giving both Moscow and Washington continued leverage on China. Peking continues to have something to worry about.

What is not clear is whether East and West are midway in an historic reversal of alliances, leading to authentic collaboration, or are merely in a passing phase which will end when one or the other party has gotten what it wants.

The passing-phase theory is supported by Moscow's massive arms buildup: by the zeal with which the Kremlin clings to its East European empire; and by the influential opponents which detente has accumulated: the Pentagon, the Soviet Defence Ministry, some members of Congress, the Israel lobby in Washington, and key leaders of NATO countries.

Still Precarious

Few, however, even among skeptics, would like to see a full-scale revival of the cold war. So East-West relations remain in a never-never land, with detente still tentative and precarious, but almost no one ready with an alternative.

The Chinese are an exception. They have an alternative: battening down the hatches against expected Soviet treachery. They miss few opportunities to urge this course on the West.

Peking's fear of the consequences of East-West detente, and China's eagerness to maintain western ties as a hedge against the presumed danger, is perhaps the single most significant benefit of detente.

This leverage is under-employed. Nixon and Kissinger are asking little of China; China probably would pay much. What she wants is assurance that there will be no Soviet-American "collusion" against her interests.

Since Soviet-American collusion is not proving very productive, in any direction, it would seem a pity not to collect the price China appears eager to pay.

Editorial Correspondence

Wheelchairs

In Saturday's paper you published a letter from Mr. R. W. Dudley wherein he says some nasty things about the way that downtown accommodates the handicapped, and he has a pretty poor opinion of our Mayor Pollen and his council. Perhaps things could improve in our city, but let me tell you another side of the story . . .

On behalf of a paraplegic who found it difficult to attend local theatres in a wheelchair because of fire regulations, I wrote to Mayor Pollen's office asking for help. I received every courtesy and a good deal of research was carried out and full co-operation was indicated by City Hall. I was told that facilities would be provided in both the Royal and the McPherson just as soon as I could obtain an indication of the wheelchair population in this area.

Then my troubles began. Firstly, I found that the disabled appeared to be rather unorganized in that each hospital seemed to have knowledge only of its own patients. I wrote to the local paraplegic society and received no reply and decided that the provincial government would be my best bet, but two letters to the Hon. Norman Levi have been ignored and I can only presume that he is too busy with his handouts to the healthy.

There things stand, the city wants to help and so do I. So if anyone out there can provide me with information about how many wheelchair users there are in this town I shall be glad to pass it on.

Let's be fair. City Hall wants to help but they cannot do it all alone. — John Addicott, 3119 Glasgow Ave.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of July 10, 1914

That Oak Bay was absolutely free from crime of any nature during the month of June was the tenor of the monthly report Chief of Police Syme presented at the Oak Bay council meeting last evening. There was subjoined the statistics dealing with the number of bylaws cases in the police court and the monies collected by and paid to the treasurer. This showed that two persons had been convicted of infractions of the bylaw relating to the control of bicycles, that one had been fined for contravening the licence bylaw and another for disregarding the provisions of the Motor Transportation Act.

Regulated Motherhood Is a Russian Tradition

By ROBERT G. KAISER

The Soviet Union that is familiar to Westerners is an exotic place, a nation of Sakharovs and Solzhenitsyns, Brezhnevs and Kosygins, SS-9s, and Olga Korbuts, bad harvests and Communism. All those exist, but they are not the principal components of the country that 250 million Soviet citizens know and live in.

The Soviet Union is less exotic, less imposing, probably less disquieting. It is a nation of countryside and towns, cottages and apartments, schools, factories and offices, electric buses and muddy sidewalks, maternity homes, wedding palaces and municipal crematoria.

Which isn't meant to be an argument that Russians are just like the rest of us, or that life is the same wherever one spends it. Worldlywise Russians like to say that "we live on a different planet," and a Westerner who has spent several years on their planet would have to agree. The quality of life in the Soviet Union is special, and perhaps unique. It is certainly unfamiliar to a North American.

Expectations are different. A Soviet woman knows she has to spend part of every day shopping for basic necessities and is prepared to chase all around town to find a nice piece of ham. She is also prepared not to find it.

A Soviet fourthgrader expects to devote part of his school day to studying Vladimir Ilyich Lenin. A Soviet newlywed expects to share a small apartment with relatives for the first years of marriage, and perhaps indefinitely.

A Soviet citizen does not expect to make his fortune, see the world or even visit the Tower of London. Nor does he fear financial disaster, the potential cost of a serious illness or his neighbor's disapproval of the crabgrass in his lawn (he hasn't got one) or the age of his car (any car will do).

This series of articles deals with life in the Soviet Union the most basic subjects, from birth to death, with the predictible intermediate stops.

These articels are based on personal observation, conversations with Russians, interviews with Soviet experts and published material, particularly the results of Soviet sociological research. They are impressionistic, not scientific. They owe a great deal to the insightful observations of Hannah Jopling Kaiser, my wife.

Though the Soviet Union is a multi-racial nation, these articles are mostly about Russians, who comprise half the population, and largely about Muscovites, who are a privileged slice of the society.

The subject is enormous, and what follows is selective. These articles do not cover the fishing trips or hunting expeditions that many Russian men regard as their greatest pleasures. Nor do they try to describe many of the small and familiar pleasures — a laughing baby, a good bowl of borscht — that convince most Russians that life is very much worth living. These articles are about the daily routine, the ordinary struggle to grow up, make a living and start a family, grow old and face the end.

In sum: I have tried to write about the category of events that journalists usually don't notice—dog bites man, not man bites dog.

MOSCOW — A Moscow street scene: a young man with a worried look standing on the sidewalk gesticulates toward a nearby building. From a second story window, a young woman in a bathrobe, smiling reassuringly, waves at him. The Soviet Union's population has just grown by one.

Husbands aren't allowed to visit the maternity hospitals where Soviet babies are born. In keeping with a national phobia about germs and babies, even the mother is separated from her new child for the first 24 hours of its life, and sometimes longer.

She will spend about 10 days in the hospital, and will see her husband only from a second-story window until she and the baby are sent home.

Motherhood is governed strictly by rules and regulations, both formal and inherited. At a lecture for expectant mothers, the doctor (like most, a woman) warned her audience: "Stay calm and take long walks every day. Don't eat too many sweets or your skin will itch. Wear only wool or cotton clothes, baby doesn't like it when you wear synthetics. Come to the polyclinic regularly for your ultraviolet rays (a source of Vitamin D)."

Many in this audience are girls of 18 and 19, the age of brides in more than half of Moscow's weddings. It is still common for a newly married woman to use her first pregnancy as the occasion to become a mother.

That is not absurd as it sounds. As a rule, birth control is not practiced in the Soviet Union. Abortion is the most widely used means of preventing unwanted children. In big cities, 80 per cent of all pregnancies are aborted.

No Anesthetic

The young women at the lecture are shy and ask no substantive questions. They listen to an explanation of what is going on inside them, and to advice about how to cope with labor and delivery. Breathe deeply, the doctor advises, oxygen is the best antidote to pain. She shows them how to rub their stomachs during labor. There are no exercises, no elaborate breathing patterns like those taught to women in the West who want to have their babies without anesthetic. There is no choice about that here; anesthetic is used only in emergencies.

American women are told that the Lamaze method of natural childbirth is based on a Russian technique, but the Russians have never heard of it.

Toward the end of pregnancy a mother is given the telephone number of the maternity home where she is to go when labor begins.

The system doesn't always work smoothly. One mother called the number she'd been given, but there was no answer. That maternity home, she learned later, was closed for "remont," a ubiquitous Russian term meaning repair and refurbishment.

Another woman had been treated at a special clinic for those whose babies, doctors feared, would be born prematurely. After eight months of pregnancy she was told not to come any more since her baby wasn't going to be premature.

She had not yet contacted another clinic when labor began. It was late at night, and she left home with her husband to find a place to have her baby.

One maternity home turned her away because there were no empty beds. But first the nurse on duty bawled her out for coming to have a baby without the proper change of clothes.

Then they went to the hospital for premature babies, and were turned away because her baby was not premature, and space couldn't be wasted on normal births.

A third establishment agreed to allow this woman to come in and have her baby. (Under the Soviet medical system, a citizen is theoretically entitled to free treatment in every medical institution.)

It was a boy, healthy and noisy. Everything turned out fine. The British may have coined the phrase "muddling through." But the Russians have mastered the art.

The delivery was uneventful, though loud. Two or three women may give birth in the same delivery room at the same time, which results, according to many witnesses, in a lot of screaming. Russian mothers expect birth to be difficult and painful. They don't seem to look forward to it. Some of the stories of those who have had babies must discourage pregnant women.

One Moscow woman recalls lying in her own blood on the delivery table for four hours after her baby was born. The nurses, cleaned up all around her, but ignored the new mother. When finally transferred to a proper bed, she was left with her dirty sheets until she screamed loudly enough to have them changed.

Once the new baby is home, little is left to chance. There are strict rules and traditions to be followed; they hardly change from generation to generation. The baby must be wrapped up like a sprained ankle, head to toe, often with a piece of wood as a brace, to make sure the baby's neck can't move. The baby must sleep on its back, wrapped in blankets. Breast feeding is mandatory. If a mother does not have enough milk, she can buy human donor's milk at special stores. The Russians have never heard of baby formula. When told of it they tend to shudder, and to doubt its efficacy.

The baby can be bathed only in boiled water, and only when submerged up to its neck, to avoid chills. The recommended treatment for diaper rash is corn oil. Petroleum jelly isn't available. The lecturer at the maternity clinic recommends that diapers be made from old sheets. Rubber pants are not sold here.

After several months a typical child shifts from mother's milk to special milk products sold at special baby kitchens. A thin, mild yogurt is the most popular. A mother must be registered on the baby kitchen's list to get this specially sterilized product, and she must pick up her supply every few days or the kitchen will take her off the list.

Better Prepared

Mothers are advised not to stop nursing an infant in the spring, when fruits and vegetabels are beginning to reappear after the long and barren Russian winter. Better to wait until midsummer, the theory goes, when baby has absorbed the stronger vitamins and minerals of these fresh foods from mother's milk, and will be better prepared for them when independent feeding begins.

Well, independent isn't quite the right word. Russian parents (even, it seems, those who read contrary advice in Dr. Spock, whose book has been translated into Russian) don't believe in letting a baby try to feed itself. The mess is offensive, and the inefficiency wasteful. So it is not unusual to see a mother patiently spooning each mouthful into a child of four or five.

In sum, the arrival of a new baby in a Russian family changes the entire orientation of family life.

Energy and resources are withdrawn from most other pursuits and redirected enthusiastically at the newcomer. No amount of fussing over the baby could be considered excessive.

The family budget can be destroyed by expenditures on baby carriages, blankets and other paraphernalia. It is fashionable to buy one's equipment all in pink for a girl, or in blue for a boy.

"Russians are an irrational people," one Moscow artist observed recently. "We are afraid of the unknown. And what could be more unknown and unknowable than this little creature who suddenly appears among us? So we devote ourselves entirely to it, in hopes this will somehow satisfy it, or remove the mystery."

Continuity — the guarantee that old traditions are sustained — is provided by the famous Russian "Babushka," or grandmother. Not every young couple has Babushka living nearby, of course, but a large percentage still do.

Her role is often greater than mama's own, especially when mama goes back to work when the baby is between three months and a year old.

Virtually every woman of child-bearing age living in a town or city holds a full-time job. A young mother is not likely to challenge her own mother's views of how to raise the child, especially if the grandmother actually does most of the raising.

It is difficult to quarrel with many of Babushka's notions. Her basic principle is love and affection, praise and appreciation to the highest possible degree, but this is coupled with a complete deprivation of independence from the earliest stages, which child psychologists in the West would find confining.

Babushkas are so sure of their basic standards that most of them unhesitatingly tell young parents on the street, even total strangers, when they are making a mistake. An American father took his 15-month-old daughter for a walk in Moscow recently. The daughter was dressed in rain gear from rubber boots and pants to sou'wester, and was running merrily through a puddle, back and forth.

An elderly lady walking by came up short.

"Papa," she said in a stern voice, "how dare you? How can you allow it? Her mama would never allow it . . ."

Babushkas routinely look into other people's baby carriages to check on the protection against Russia's unpredictable weather, and freely express an opinion if one seems called for.

Like virtually any aspect of life in the Soviet Union, childbearing is a subject of interest to the state. And there is official displeasure about one aspect of giving birth: It happens too seldom.

Despite all the enthusiasm and affection that Russian parents and grandparents throw into the raising of their first child, it is increasingly likely that the first will also be the last.

In Moscow, families with one child are the most common size. Families with three children are virtually unheard of. "Of all my friends and acquaintances, I can think of just one with three children," a Moscow engineer observed recently. "He's an Orthodox priest."

Rural families are slightly larger, but Russia proper is approaching, and may have reached, zero population growth. The major cities would now be shrinking, were it not for migration from the countryside.

The population of the Soviet Union will continue to grow, thanks to high birth rates in Central Asia and the Transcaucasus. This is a source of anxiety — to demographers here, though the anxiety is expressed in muted terms, for fear it might sound racist. Russians are now probably just less than half the total Soviet population, and their share of the total is shrinking.

The declining growth is the subject of much commentary in the press and professional journals, but no one has proposed a practical way to persuade Russian women to have more babies. On the contrary, the officially encouraged Soviet way of life — small-apartment living, working women, generally tight budgets — seems to be establishing the one-child family as a norm, at least for city dwellers.

The state could abolish the right to abortion on demand which helps Soviet women keep their families small, but there is no guarantee that this would have the desired effect.

Stalin made most abortions illegal in 1936, resulting in a short-term rise in the birth rate, but eventually a decline. When abortion was legalized again in 1955, the birthrate did not fall.

Illegal abortion thrived during those years, and women may have taken other measures to prevent pregnancy.

Unofficial abortion — "on the left," in the Russian phrase — is still common. Many women want to avoid the humilitation of an official arbortion, accompanied by lectures on the need to bring more children into the world, and marred by the discomfort of Soviet hospitals. A privately arranged abortion at home costs 30 to 50 rubles, or nearly half the monthly salary of an average working woman.

Another proposal is to improve the economic benefits to working women to encourage them to have more children. Soviet benefits now are less generous than those in some East European countries. A working mother gets two months' leave with pay to have a baby, and her job is held open for her for one year. There is no family allowance on the West European model until a fourth child is born, and then it is only four rubles a month.

Nursery Network

The state could also expand the network of state-run nurseries and kindergartens, which now have space for about one-quarter of the country's children up to age three, and more than two-thirds between four and seven.

The prevailing opinions among experts in Moscow is that, ideally, a child should be put into a nursery, where it will usually spend a 9 to 12-hour day, at the age of three months. This releases the mothers for a quick return to the work force, and brings the child into "the collective" at an age which makes its physical and psychological adjustment the easiest.

Not surprisingly, many mothers resist this idea.

There is also no guarantee that better economic benefits and child services would increase the birth rate. In fact, there is contrary evidence. From 1960 to 1966, the number of spaces in Moscow day care centres grew by 61.5 per cent but the birth rate fell 52 per cent.

DESPITE WIDESPREAD use of daycare centres, women's struggles to combine long working hours with motherhood are pulling Russia closer to zero population growth.

IMPORTED QUASI-CULTURE BRINGS BOOM TO MASERU

By DERIK INGRAM

MASERU, Lesotho — The chickens still jump up and down on the steps outside the 70-year-old tin-roofed house that was once a dispensary and is now Lesotho's Department of Information. A cow strays across the main street of Lesotho's capital.

The friendly little single-storey house opposite, designed by Sir Herbert Baker, Edwardian architect of grander imperial piles in Pretoria and New Delhi, bears in its front gate the bold legend "Prime Minister's Office."

Down the road the scene is different: the huge and all-too-familiar yellow and green sign with a gaudy star on top that proclaims the existence of a Holiday Inn.

It is customary the world over for this appalling piece of graphic art to incorporate a daily announcement of the entertainment to be enjoyed at the Holiday Inn. Just now in Maseru there is something special to report: the staging of "Hair" in the hotel theatre.

For Maseru it is a coup. "Hair" cannot be performed across the border in the republic of South Africa; for one reason its cast is racially mixed.

The local paper The Echo rubs it in. In a news story about the rehearsals is set out the improbable names of those members of the cast thus far assembled, with the countries they come from and the color of their skins. Thus: "Demarist Grey, USA, black girl; Rialindia Farrell, U.S., black girl; Talip Patterson, Cape black boy; Sunny Chayes, USA, white girl; Sonny Junior, Cape black boy," and so forth.

"Hair" will fill the Holiday Inn theatre for weeks. It will run for as long as it does good business. Recently the hotel did the same with "Godspell" and it was a knockout.

The publicity is thorough; white T-shirts in the Maseru shops bear the familiar, bushy-haired, multi-colored head from the posters with the solitary words "Hair at Maseru" across the chest.

Though those few locals who can afford it will enjoy the fun — and the show inside — the target of the Holiday Inn is not the fine-featured, quiet-mannered Basotho people but the thousands of South African whites from Bloemfontein and beyond who pour into Maseru now to taste forbidden fruit: gambling at the tables of the Holiday Inn casino and in the halls of slot machines outside, and films the censor won't let them see at home.

It is all big business for Holiday Inns Ltd., which has already enlarged its hotel in Maseru, opened ceremoniously by Prime Minister Chief Jonathan in 1970, and will soon open another one elsewhere in Lesotho which, apart from all the other financial benefits, procures 15 cents tax per person per night's stay in the country.

Hotels are sprouting everywhere in bare, poor, starkly beautiful Lesotho. In 1966 only 3,600 tourists visited the country; now the figure is well over 100,000. Soon Maseru will have a Hilton as well as a Holiday Inn.

The romantic must sigh away another piece of unspoiled earth to the assault of European mass quasi-culture. An urban sprawl of sorts is beginning to set in. No one can blame the Basotho; they desperately need the help and at last some cash is beginning to flow their way.

The British left them with precious little at independence: one mile of paved road in a land of a million people (today there are more than 100 miles) and a bare subsistence allowance.

Half a mile out of Maseru the people live a hard, cold existence in one of the world's most dramatic landscapes, mountains to which they have clung since their ancestors trekked there in 1824 and beat off the repeated assaults of colonial and Boer forces.

With the help of missionaries — mostly Roman Catholic (60 per cent of the people are said to be Catholic today) they have managed to become one of the most literate states in Africa. Something over 50 per cent of the people can read and write. For most of them, too, there is perhaps less undernourishment and disease than in most parts of Africa.

But they need all the help they can get. If the South Africans care to behave in a somewhat degrading manner at the Holiday Inn, standing by the dozen pulling at the slot machines they can't instal in their own country, then why should the Basotho worry?

As one of them said: "We need that 15 cents."

VSE Looks for Fall Boom As Trading Slump Continues

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

The Vancouver Stock Exchange outperformed Toronto during the first six months of 1974 but this is small consolation to VSE officials.

"The market is still in a slump and we are hanging in there hoping for a boom in October," an exchange spokesman said.

Average daily trading during the first six months was 2.4 million, well below the break-even level for the exchange of 3 million. However, the average was 2.4 million during the first six months of 1973 as well and a fall boom boosted the average to a healthy 3.5 million for all of 1973.

"We are cautiously optimistic that it will happen again this year, starting about October," the spkesman said.

"There is still some exploration going on despite Bill 31 but it is generally quiet. The talk about exploration being halted by Bill 31 is exaggerated but there has been a noticeable decline in activity. We believe it will pick up again before long."

During the first six months the Vancouver Stock Exchange traded 331.6 million shares, up from 310.2 million in the first six months of 1973.

Value of shares traded was $252.4 million, up from $244.4 million.

By contrast the value of shares traded on the Toronto Stock Exchange during the first six months fell to $2.9 billion, down from $3.3 billion in the same period of 1973.

While Bill 31, the new royalty legislation, has not halted exploration, it had a dampening effect on the market when it was announced on Feb. 19, the first-half report shows.

The exchange had several days of 6 million shares being sold until Feb. 19. Then volume declined to about 1.5 million for 2 months.

There has been a moderate recovery since that time and there were several days when volume topped 4 million shares in June.

The exchange is into its usual summer slump in July with many investors on vacation.

"It usually is well into October before the market picks up again. We are confident that it will again, despite Bill 31. But, then, we are always optimistic."

In Toronto, the market went into a decided slump in June that has continued into the early part of July.

June trading in Toronto fell to $271.4 million, down from the previous month's $360.5 million and the lowest level since August, 1970.

Dollar value of the key industrial list was $222.6 million in June, down 20.7 per cent from May and down 18 per cent from the previous June.

Toronto trading in mines in June fell 32.6 per cent from the $46.4 million traded in May and 39.3 per cent from the previous June.

Oil trading in June fell to $17.5 million from $33.5 million in May.

Total volume of shares traded in June was 33.1 million shares, down 22.6 per cent from the 42.7 million shares traded the previous month.

High interest rates and concern about a possible recession have eroded stock values during the first half of 1974. Political uncertainties have also been a factor, although the election of a majority government in Canada may restore some confidence in the market.

There is no sign of a decline in interest rates, however.

Golds To Set Record

Gold mining shares were one of the few attractions in a generally bad market during the first six months for the Toronto Stock Exchange.

Gold company earnings rose sharply along with the price and at mid-year the outlook was for record income.

However, in the first few days in July there has been a pronounced change in the outlook for gold companies.

The price has fallen to a six-month low, although it is still about $145 per ounce. And the Liberal Party was re-elected with a complete majority, bringing the prospect that its budget proposals will be passed into law.

The government plans to remove the provision for deducting provincial taxes from federal tax calculations and the 40 per cent depletion allowance for gold mines would be replaced by an earned depletion allowance.

The Victoria office of T. A. Richardson and Co. Ltd. has released a mid-year survey of major gold companies on the Toronto exchange but the report makes clear the fortunes of the companies could be altered by the events of recent days.

The figures do not take into account any new tax changes, such as those proposed by Ottawa, and the report assumes a 1974 average price of $150 per ounce for gold. The price has been extremely volatile and the $150 price seems a good average as of mid-year but it is far from certain.

As of mid-year the 1974 outlook for the major companies in earnings per share was as follows (1973 earnings in brackets):

Sigma Mines $4 ($1.82), Robin Red Lake .60 (.33), Pamour Porcupine $1.10 (.41), Agnico-Eagle .66 (.09), Camflo $1.75 ($1.31), Campbell Red Lake $2 ($1.11), Dickenson Mines .80 (.48), Dome Mines $4.35 ($2.52).

Outlook for other companies:

East Malartic .60 (.40), Giant Yellowknife $1.20 (.99), Kerr Addison $1.60 ($1.04) and Madsen Red Lake .30 (.19).

Atlas

Shareholders of Atlas Explorations Ltd., at a special meeting Tuesday, unanimously endorsed a resolution for change of name and consolidation of capital.

The name was changed to Cima Resources Ltd. and the capitalization was consolidated on a one-for-four basis.

When the changes are ratified by the British Columbia Registrar of Companies there will be 10 million shares authorized and 1,315,565 issued and outstanding. Dynasty Exploration Ltd. owns 18 per cent of the outstanding shares.

MacMillan Bloedel

MacMillan Bloedel has completed a private placement in the United States market of 20-year 8¾-per-cent debentures. The debentures are in the principal amount of $75 million.

The company declined further comment on the placement.

Volkswagen

World sales by Volkswagen in the first half of 1974 declined 17.5 per cent from the same period in 1973 says chairman Rudolf Leiding. He said 1.02 million vehicles had been sold.

Poor sales and sharply rising costs make a VW loss in 1974 a possibility, he told the annual stockholders' meeting here.

Volkswagen will decide soon whether to build an assembly plant in the United States, Leiding added.

The VW chairman forecast no sales upturn soon, and declared that automobile production in the advanced countries would grow slowly in the future.

But he expressed hope that a series of four VW models will give the company a sales lift as soon as the automobile market improves.

The Volkswagen sales slump led the parent company to offer a bonus of $2,000 to $3,600 to workers willing to quit in June. Almost 3,500 employees accepted the offer, which brought the West German staff down to about 122,000.

Canadian Dam Builders Impress the World

MONTREAL (CP) — Camille Dagenais, president of the SNC Group of engineering consultants, believes the world is "quite impressed" with Canadian expertise in dam-building.

He offers that as one reason for his recent election as vice-president of the International Commission of Large Dams, a group of technicians from 65 countries who meet regularly to swap information on dam construction.

Other reasons are not hard to find. Dagenais has been personally associated with some of the most spectacular hydro-electric projects of recent years.

He was chief project manager of the "Manic 5" development in northern Quebec which in September, 1968, saw completion of the Daniel Johnson Dam, tallest of its type in the world.

Other major credits include participation in a multiple arch dam project in Idikki, India; in a major feasibility study of hydro-electric potential of two rivers in northern Greece, and in studies of nuclear power stations for Hydro-Quebec and Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd.

Dagenais says his election to represent the Americas as one of six vice-presidents of the international commission is more than a personal honor.

"They have also recognized the fact that Canada is an important country with lots of knowledge in building dams," he said in a recent interview.

Members of the international commission who toured dam sites here in 1970 were impressed, but Dagenais believes Canadian dam engineers had an established reputation before that.

"We do have quite a pool of knowledge," he said. Five Canadian consulting firms are recognized as leaders in this domain, and four of them are in Quebec.

"Dam-building is not the kind of knowledge people run after," he said. "Other people have the knowledge as well.

"You have to compete, but when we do compete, we are usually very successful in obtaining assignments," he said.

As an officer of the dam commission, he will sit in on yearly executive meetings, help with administration and represent the group to other international organizations including the United Nations.

He believes the 50-year-old organization should begin to shift its focus from traditional hydro-electric dams because of approaching changes in dam technology.

First, he says, traditional dam sites around the world are being used up. New hydro-electric dams will have to be radically different in design and operation, such as structures with water on both sides that take advantage of ocean tides.

Secondly, dams will find increasing use outside the field of power generation. As an example he mentioned dams built to contain mine tailings and other industrial residue.

One Poll Right on Predicting Outcome

TORONTO (CP) — Public opinion surveys conducted in the final days of the 1974 election campaign by the well-known Gallup organization and the country's two major television networks showed a marked difference in their summation of the electoral mood of the country.

On the basis of returns showing a Liberal majority that sharply reversed the result of the 1972 election, only the Gallup Poll was right on the mark while the publicly-owned CBC and its privately-owned competitor, CTV, were only partly correct.

The Gallup survey, conducted here by the Toronto-based Canadian Institute of Public Opinion, was published by its subscribers last Saturday and showed the Liberals would hold 43 per cent of the popular vote.

With more than 97 per cent of the 64,092 polls reported Tuesday, the unofficial result for the Liberals was exactly 43 per cent.

The Gallup Poll had predicted 35 per cent for the Progressive Conservatives and 16.5 per cent for the New Democratic Party and the election day results were, respectively, 35.5 and 16 per cent.

SURVEYED 1,374

That prediction was based on what a poll spokesman described as "a modified probability" survey of 1,374 households across the country — approximately 10 per cent of them in the Atlantic provinces, 28 per cent in Quebec, 36 per cent in Ontario and the remainder in the West. A series of standard questions, based on a long-perfected system, was augmented by in-home interviews.

The two television networks were correct in that they generally expected a return of the Liberal government. But they were wrong in that they predicted a minority.

The CBC, which based its original June 13 prediction on a random survey of 1,000 adults, said then it expected the Liberals would form another majority government in the 264-seat Commons.

Fifty-two per cent of those surveyed expected a Liberal win, 20 per cent said Conservative, three the NDP, two Social Credit and the remainder was undecided.

SAW MAJORITY

In its final pre-election poll, released last Thursday, the Crown corporation said that analysis of its poll "indicates that the July 8 election is almost certain to produce another minority government, probably a Liberal minority ... but that a Progressive Conservative minority government now is a possibility."

The over-all support for the Liberals dropped two percentage points in the second survey — of 1,240 eligible voters — while the Conservatives' rose by the same amount.

The CTC network, in a news release June 16, said its survey showed the Liberals with 41 per cent of the vote, the Conservatives with 22, the NDP with 13 and the Social Credit with three. Twenty-one per cent were reported undecided.

Last Sunday night, a fresh survey showed the Conservatives making slight gains and the Liberals dropping marginally. The second breakdown was Liberals 37.8 per cent of the vote, Conservatives 26.1, NDP 12.5, Social Credit 1.9 and, again, undecided 21 per cent.

Caouette Names Son to Post

ROUYN, Que. (CP) — Real Caouette aid Tuesday he will appoint his son national organizer of the Social Credit party to give him the exposure needed to eventually succeed his father as party leader.

Gilles Caouettes first duties as national organizer would be to strengthen Social Credit organizations in English-Canada, particularly Ontario.

Gilles Caouette, 34, was one of four Social Credit members in the last House whom Real Caouette had mentioned at the beginning of the federal election campaign as his possible successor.

Gilles, however, lost his riding of Charlevois Monday night to Liberal Charles Lapointe.

The elder Caouette said he would not ask any of the party's other 10 members of Parliament elected Monday night to step down to allow Gilles to run in a byelection.

CTV Suing Computer Company

TORONTO (CP) — The CTV television network has instituted legal proceedings against Systems Dimensions Ltd. of Ottawa which provided computer services for the networks federal election coverage, a CTV spokesman said Tuesday.

Tom Gould, vice-president of news features and information programs, said the network is seeking $2.5 million damages.

He said the computer system failed repeatedly during the election coverage.

The network, he said, was competitive with or ahead of the CBC through the Atlantic provinces but computer breakdowns began when returns started flowing in from Quebec and Ontario.

The network said every facet of its television operation was linked to the computer, including its giant display board, regional boards, editorial information and riding breakdowns.

Bangladesh Outlaw Mobs Face Crackdown by Army

DACCA (AP) Bangladesh, born in a bloodbath, still is suffering from killings and lawlessness so widespread that the armed forces have been called in to restore order.

Bandits roam the countryside with automatic weapons and machine-guns left over from the 1971 war against Pakistan. Local political feuds often are settled in gunplay.

Prime Minister Mujibur Rahman ordered the armed forces on April 24 to assist police in smashing outlaw mobs whose wartime weaponry made them stronger than the police.

Home Minister Delwar Hussain told parliament recently that 9,560 persons have been reported murdered since Bangladesh seized its independence from Pakistan in 1971. More than 2,500 have been killed in the last year alone, he added.

The victims included 264 political workers and leaders, four members of the Constituent Assembly and three members of the National Assembly, Hussain said.

Seven students were hauled out of their Dacca University dormitories recently and executed in what was described as campus political rivalry.

As a result, rifle-carrying soldiers guard the entrances to university dormitories. Strangers are refused admission without special authorization.

The lawlessness hits isolated villages hardest. Forty bandits, who recently struck at the village of Garakhola, 150 miles west of Dacca, were typical of their kind, defence ministry official said.

The bandits arrived shooting their automatic weapons into the air about 11 p.m.

After beating up a few villagers and warning that anyone who called police would be shot, the officials reported, the bandits took off into the night with all the cash, gold, jewels and radios they could find.

Soldiers and police working together have arrested more than 3,000 outlaws and seized 7,670 weapons, about a quarter of them sub-machine guns, the ministry spokesman said. But thousands more guns are believed to be hidden around the country.

Weapons are not the only thing left over from the war leading to lawlessness, observers say. Also a factor is the psychological hangover of brutal Pakistani repression and the long months of guerrilla killings leading to the all-out independence war.

Sea Sludge Not Far Out

LONG BEACH, N.Y. (UPI) — A team of marine biologists, students, and divers Tuesday found evidence of noxious and potentially dangerous sewer sludge just 300 yards off Atlantic Beach, a popular summer resort.

They said millions of tons of it may wash ashore by 1977.

Rod Vanderberg, a spokesman for the group, said Tuesday's find was not part of the main sludge body, which is still about 3.5 miles offshore.

The main body, he said, citing a recent study by Brooklyn College professor William Harris, is creeping shoreward at a rate of "a mile to a mile and a half" each year, and at present rate, "the sludge will wash ashore within the next two or three years."

Currently being discharged at a rate of more than 13 metric tons a year by New York City, Nassau and Westchester Counties and parts of New Jersey, the sludge has been dumped into a depression in the ocean floor for the last 50 years.

"The problem is that the depression (located 11 miles offshore) is filled up and the stuff is sloshing over down there," said Vanderberg.

Marine biologists are concerned about the sludge for another, potentially more serious, reason:

"It affects the marine food chain," Vanderberg said. "The shell fish and small marine organisms are first affected.

"These are eaten by larger and larger fish and, if allowed to continue, this could and would affect virtually all of the marine food chain in the New York area."

Only immediate government action, he said, could preserve the beaches and protect marine life.

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

They're not learning to perform music on any instrument. They're not even learning to dance or sing specifically.

But a very happy group of youngsters in ages ranging from three to nine years is finding out about rhythm and musical sounds and the fun they can have with them in a creative play situation.

"The key to everything is improvisation," says Miss Patterson. "We use movement, singing, speech, simple percussion instruments and taped music to draw from the children their own creative responses."

The classes are based on Carl Orff's world-famous teaching ideas. The German composer-teacher-musicologist developed an education concept that attempts to awaken latent musical expression through movement and musical improvisation.

The classes are held Mondays, Wednesdays and Friday from 9 a.m. to noon and will continue through July.

She is a member of the gifted Patterson family quartet — Pat, Ann, Bill and Susie — who delighted Music Festival audiences during the '60s in the family class where they played recorders, stringed instruments and piano and sang.

In September the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. M. Patterson, Tudor Road, will return overseas to continue the study of viola at London's Royal College of Music.

Joli May Set Record In City-Maui Race

Race officials are expecting the 61-foot Seattle sloop Joli to complete the 2,300 Victoria-Maui race either tonight or early Thursday.

If she does, she will set a record for the ocean racing class, beating Odusa's time in 1972.

Joli was reported 260 miles from Maui Tuesday.

The sloop continued to be plagued by radio problems and race officials were unable to confirm the the sighting by the freighter Hawaiian Enterprise.

Naknek, a 53-foot Vancouver sloop, was next., 720 miles from Maui. Namu and Temptation, a 57-foot Tacoma, Wash., yacht were 32 miles behind Naknek.

The other vessels, in order, were: Tinsley Light, Amante II, Race Passage, Scaramouche, Biscuit Eater, Searay, Red Dog, Obsession, Nambe, Namba, Mad Hatter, Elixer, Rana, Border Lord, Seawyf and Lucy Alice.

No report was received from the 30-foot Seattle sloop Native Dancer which was trying to conserve battery power and not using its radio.

The smallest ship in the fleet, Mad Hatter, was the leader on corrected time. Tinsley Light followed, nine hours later.

Winds were southeast at 10 knots with five-foot seas. Race officials said there was some rough water Monday night but Tuesday the fleet night bu Tuesday the fleet faced calmer seas.

Death Benefits Said Too Low

VANCOUVER (CP) — Insurance companies do not pay a realistic amount for deaths resulting from motor vehicle accidents, a British Columbia research analyst told B.C. Supreme Court Tuesday.

Keith Godfrey, who has studied motor vehicle accidents, said insurance companies pay less for fatalities than they do for injuries.

The provincial government researcher was testifying at a trial in which 37 private insurance companies are seeking a court declaration that the B.C. Government's Autoplan insurance scheme is invalid on constitutional grounds.

He told Mr. Justice J. S. Aikins that insurance companies paid out a total of $114 million in B.C. in 1972, adding that the amount, taking into account fatalities, does not seem realistic in terms of loss to society.

Godfrey said various figures are available relating to the loss of human life in terms of earnings and the net contribution of an individual to society.

The assessments range, he said, from $46,000 to $400,000 depending on the criteria taken into account.

Godfrey said the figures include an Australian estimate of $120,000 and an assessment by the U.S. National Highway Transportation Safety Administration of $300,000 in terms of loss to society as the result of an individual's fatality.

Godfrey said $100,000 would be a conservative estimate of the loss to society resulting from a fatality and this would translate into $80 million resulting from B.C. traffic deaths in 1973.

The witness said the real loss to society therefore, based on the 1972 figures, would have been closer to $194 million than $114 million.

Ray Hadfield, superintendent of motor vehicles for B.C., testified that there were 2,080 convictions of motorists driving without insurance in 1972 and estimated as many as six per cent of all motorists were uninsured that year.

He was unable to say how effective Autoplan has been in reducing the number of uninsured drivers because the scheme which ties insurance to vehicle licences, has only been in effect for just over four months.

Questioned by Douglas Brown, counsel for the plaintiffs, Hadfield agreed that Autoplan legislation includes provisions for protection against uninsured motorists because there would no doubt continue to be persons driving illegally without insurance.

The trial continues.

Arms Export Suspects Remanded

TORONTO (CP) — Seven men charged with conspiracy to export arms following police seizures July 2, were remanded Tuesday to Oct. 21 for trial.

The men were arrested after an RCMP investigation that turned up a variety of guns and thousands of rounds of ammunition, hand grenades and other weapons which they believed were bound for Ireland.

Also charged are Williams Gilroy, 29, Robert Gray, 31, John Gerald Heany, 28, and Daniel McNamara, 54, all of Toronto.

In addition Myles, Gilroy, Gray, Heany, and Kent are charged with exporting arms contrary to Section 13 of the Export and Import Permits Act.

Expert Fired

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Valentin Turchin, a Soviet computer expert and human rights activist, was fired from his job as senior research assistant at a Moscow Institute Tuesday for his support of dissident physicist Andrei Sakharov, friends said. Turchin, 43, is president of the Soviet section of the human rights organization Amnesty International.

U.S. Navy Students Cheated

ANNAPOLIS (WP) — Seven midshipmen have been forced to resign from the U.S. Naval Academy because they cheated on an examination. The instructor who provided answers to the exam that the midshipmen used has been reprimanded and transferred to a non-teaching assignment, according to Vice-Admiral William P. Mack, superintendent of the Naval Acaemy.

Mack also told a press conference that 13 other midshipmen have been placed on probation for using "poor judgment" in connection with a compromised May 21 navigation exam.

The seven ousted midshipment constitute the largest group of middies to be separated from the academy for violations of its honor code at one time in at least the past decade.

However, Mack said that 41 of the 61 midshipmen who had been suspected of cheating on the exam were found innocent by the six-week investigation. He called the cheating episode "an incident," not a scandal.

The instructor "was trying to help. He went a little bit overboard in helping and he gave them answers that he shouldn't have," Mack said.

May 23, academy officials announced that they were investigating suspected widespread cheating on the navigation exam. More than 900 sophomore midshipmen were ordered to re-take the exam after one of them alerted officials shortly before the original exam that some middies apparently had answers written in nautical almanacs that they were permitted to bring to the exam for reference.

Mao Backer Dies

TOKYO (AP) — Hu Chitsung, 54, a member of the 10th central committee of China's Communist party and one of the leading supporters of Chairman Mao Tse-tung in Kansu Province, died July 4, the official New China news agency reported Tuesday.

New Surgery Technique Brain-Chilling

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — Surgeons at Montefiore Hospital have begun "freezing" brain tissue before surgery, reducing operating time and eliminating the loss of blood and the need to open the chest to start the heart again.

The neurosurgeons have performed five operations under the process, including the removal of four tumors and one swollen artery. All were performed after temporarily lowering brain temperatures almost 40 degrees below normal.

All of the normal functions of the body's organs are halted during the operation, including heart beat, electrical activity in the brain and circulation, by replacing blood in the brain with a clear saltwater solution used in the chilling process.

Dr. Robert Selker and Dr. Sidney Wolfson, who head the neurosurgical team, said the patient's body is cooled to about 86 degrees, 13 degrees below normal, by a "water blanket" wrapped around the skin.

The heart beat then is stopped by a minor electric shock and a large volume of a saltwater solution at 32 degrees is pumped into a neck artery, circulating through the head and back to the chest.

"Each organ in the body is cooled to a temperature that protects," Dr. Wolfson said. "The tissues stop functioning, although they continue to metabolize and use oxygen, only at a slower rate."

Grafting blood vessels into the brain, an operation for stroke victims, as well as correcting tangled arteries and removing large tumors, all might benefit from the new procedure, Dr. Selker said.

The key to the technique is that the body will resuscitate without great effort when the operation is concluded, Dr. Wolfson said.

WORK CLOSES VANCOUVER'S MAIN RUNWAY

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Ministry of Transport announced Tuesday the main runway of the Vancouver International Airport will be closed from Thursday for a $1.6 million paving and lighting job expected to take until mid-September.

An MoT spokesman said some scheduled flight arrivals and departures may be changed and some international trips may require longer flight times to allow for extra refuelling stops.

Pacific regional administrator J. A. Lenahan said the main impact of the runway closure will be on residents of nearby Point Grey and Richmond as planes that usually arrive and leave over the Gulf of Georgia and other less populated areas now will fly over them.

However, Lenahan said the main runway will be open during daylight hours on weekends.

Winnipeg FP Trial Starts

WINNIPEG (CP) — Six employees of the Winnipeg Free Press testified Tuesday as trial began in provincial court on charges of unfair labor practices by the newspaper.

The employees are members of The Newspaper Guild, which was certified last year as bargaining agent for editorial and advertising employees. No contract has yet been reached.

The newspaper is charged with interfering with employee rights to belong to the guild, increasing employee wages without guild consent and with verbally attempting to induce an employee to cease to be a member of the guild.

Testimony Tuesday centred on activities of a company staff association.

An advertising department employee testified she and 18 other women were told by their night supervisor to listen to a presentation made by a representative of the staff association. She said the representative told them the company would rather listen to the association than the guild.

Another advertising employee said he had been told the association was backed by Richard C. Malone, then assistant to the publisher. Malone since has been appointed publisher.

Following testimony, Free Press counsel presented a motion to dismiss the charges for lack of evidence. The hearing continues.

Five Planes Crash

RANGOON (AP) — Five Burma air force jet fighters flying in formation crashed into mountains 100 miles north of Rangoon, killing all 10 flying officers aboard, the government announced Tuesday. The announcement said heavy rains and strong winds developed soon after the five T33 jets, each with a two-man crew, took off Saturday for the 300-mile flight north to Meiktila.

Provincial Aid Called a Must In Merger Plan

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Colwood and Langford would probably be in favor of municipal status "if the pot is sweet enough," Langford regional director Earl Pallister said today.

With indications from Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer that there will be some sort of municipality formed in Colwood, Langford and View Royal within a year, both Pallister and Colwood director Dick Emery said they were in favor of the amalgamation, but only if the provincial government picks up part of the tab.

"We've had years of neglect out here and it must be corrected before we can start organizing," Pallister said.

"We have to find out exactly what the government is going to do for us.

"We're not going to just pick up the bill for services we don't have yet."

The question of amalgamation in the sprawling outlying areas has been around for almost 10 years, with residents violently opposed to any forced municipal status.

In 1969, a vote of 93 per cent against amalgamation in Colwood, and 88 per cent against in Langford, turned then Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell away from any such move.

But since then the area has grown — without plans, without controls, leaving the region open to poor development and booming land speculation.

Now the feeling of residents is probably in favor of an amalgamation that would bring some sort of order to an area that has got out of hand, Pallister indicated.

"Before the government was just saying, 'There's the open door, go ahead and get out on your own.' That kind of thing was really quite unfair."

In a meeting Tuesday with regional officials, Lorimer promised that some of the financial burden that would accompany municipal status would be picked up by the provincial government.

"The government has to come across with financial assistance," Emery said.

The government can either continue paying for existing government services, such as road maintenance and policing, or provide the cash for the fledgling municipality to keep up the service.

Lorimer didn't promise that there would be a referendum held on the question, but Pallister and Emery are keeping their fingers crossed that residents will have a say about their future.

Most officials in the area feel that the View Royal district would be "more logically" united with Esquimalt — except Esquimalt and View Royal.

"Everybody says it's m ore logical to go with Esquimalt, but we just want to be left alone," View Royal regional director Pat Massey said today.

"There is opposition in Esquimalt to having us with them and we don't want to go in with Colwood-Langford.

"We just want to be left alone to form our own township or municipality."

If View Royal were amalgamated with Esquimalt, it would have to be brought up to that municipality's standards in such things as street lights, sidewalks, parks and sewers, Massey said.

"If we're incorporated, our taxes will go up and people are going to want to see some extra services right away," she said.

View Royal has "a whole different character" than Colwood and Langford, Massey said, and residents don't want to be lumped in with an area that is going through such tremendous growing pains.

View Royal Ratepayers' Association president Tony Miller said that given the choice of Esquimalt or Colwood, residents would choose Esquimalt.

"But if we're given three choices, we'll stay on our own."

Miller suggested yet another alternative, "that is very logical from an engineering service and maintenance view" — all of View Royal north of the Island Highway could amalgamate with Saanich and the rest could go with Esquimalt.

Another meeting with Lorimer is planned for later this month to discuss the details of financial assistance for the areas.

Inmates Ready Jamboree Camp

3,600 Boy Scouts Expected

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

When 3,600 boy scouts set up their tents at Camp Barnard near Sooke, Aug. 1, a group of William Head prison inmates will feel a small glow of pride.

They should. If it weren't for the inmates, Camp Barnard might not have been ready in time for the 10-day B.C.-Yukon Boy Scout Jamboree, second ever held in B.C.

Since late 1973 eight or nine-man crews from William Head have been putting in eight-hour days at the campsite, clearing the area, making trails, clearing a beach for swimming, fixing up buildings.

"These fellows did a fantastic job," said Bob Muir, director of the scout camp.

Muir has been preparing for the jamboree since last August and has found it a "great undertaking."

The jamboree is turning out to be much bigger than anyone anticipated, he said. Originally 2,500 boys were expected, but a last-minute flood of applications sent the number up to 3,600.

With scout leaders, that will put more than 4,000 campers at Camp Barnard, which had an original capacity of 180.

Add to that a staff of 500 to 600 to man the camp's 10-bed hospital, its canteen, bank, post office, and other services, and you've got a small city.

Muir said the inmates have been so enthusiastic some have asked to help out during the jamboree, but William Head acting director John Sheridan said that would be "very, very doubtful."

The inmates work on a temporary day parole at the camp, and for many it's their first venture into the community again, he said. It's been a good training ground to accustom them to an eight-hour work day, Sheridan added.

The jamboree, first since one held in Penticton in 1966, will draw boys from across B.C. Contingents are also coming from other provinces, the United States and even Scotland.

One of Canada's Eskimo scout troops will also be attending, Muir said.

Called the Jamboree of Challenge, the event will offer boys canoeing, archery, sailing, horseback riding, mountaineering, log burling and many other activities to try.

Venturers — older scouts aged 14 to 18 — will go on an overnight survival trek. Younger boys will be given tours of the Dockyard, Legislative Buildings and other sights.

The Phoenix Rover Scouts, a Victoria group of mentally retarded boys, will be helping out with the massive job of sorting rations in the food distribution centre.

Each troop of eight scouts will pick up its rations at the centre to cook by themselves.

Muir said naturalists like Freeman King have been consulted in preparing the jamboree site to make sure the ecology isn't damaged.

"We're not removing trees," he said.

He said he was a "little concerned" about the numbers of visitors which would probably flood into the camp each day. The Penticton jamboree had 30,000 visitors, he said.

The jamboree will be open to the public each day from 2 to 9 p.m.

"This will be the first chance for many of these boys to go to jamboree," Muir said. From Victoria 285 boys will attend, and there's a waiting list of several hundred scouts from all over B.C.

Cost to each boy for the 10-day stay is $60.

Former Jailer Jailed 30 Days For $10 Theft

A former jailer with Victoria city police department was sentenced to 30 days in jail and fined $200 Tuesday for stealing a $10 bill from a prisoner last March.

Albert Julian Wilson, 59, of 1007 Esquimalt, a 30-year veteran of the force and jailer for eight-and-a-half years, had pleaded guilty in provincial court June 21.

The charge stemmed from an incident March 1 when a $10 bill planted on a man jailed on a drunk charge was later recovered in Wilson's effects. Police did not say why or how the money was planted.

Judge Fred Green, who had postponed sentencing for presentence and psychiatric reports, called the theft a breach of trust which had brought discredit to the police department.

"Such an act cannot be condoned," he said. "A police officer occupies a special position. The public looks to him for safety and protection."

Green rejected an appeal by defence lawyer Dermond Owen-Flood for a discharge.

"It would be contrary to the public interest to do so," he said.

Wilson joined the force in 1944 and was 18 months from retirement. He was suspended when the charge was laid and resigned shortly after.

Green, citing testimony from defence witnesses, said the accused had been unhappy with his job as jailer and had repeatedly asked to be relieved.

Witnesses testified Wilson had undergone a personality change over the past year, becoming "nervous" and suffering depression, Green said.

"His behavior would be understandable perhaps because of a long-standing resentment of the police force," he said.

Owen-Flood had pointed out Wilson's career had been destroyed. He compared the case to one earlier this year in Ottawa where a senior police officer had been found guilty of shoplifting, yet was granted a conditional discharge.

Green said he had considered that case and cited four others involving police officers convicted of crimes.

Quoting judgments in those cases, he said "where a trusted public servant violates the trust given him, deterrence should be . . . the principle factor."

"While a police officers' job may be onerous and depressing at times, so are other occupations."

Green said Wilson's act "violated trust, brought discredit to the department, and abused the position of authority, power and control he had held."

"There may be mitigating circumstances but the fact is a police officer committed theft."

Tow Trucker Rescues Car With Splash

Garry Martin usually drives up to cars he has to tow away — but today he swam.

Martin, 26, a driver for Victoria Super Service Towing, had to swim 20 feet in Beacon Hill Park's Goodaere Lake to attach a chain to a nearly-submerged car.

The chain attached, Martin swam back to shore, got in his truck and started to pull out the car.

Another chain linked Martin's truck to another truck to prevent Martin from slipping.

A chain was also used to link the other truck to a tree to prevent that truck from slipping.

The car is owned by Edward MacDonald, 1518 Dallas, who told police it had been stolen some time after 11 p.m. Tuesday.

Second Woodward's Store Starts at Mayfair Mall

The building is being constructed on the parking lot north of the present store. In addition, a three-tier parking lot is being constructed to add 300 spaces to the present parking capacity of 1,300 cars.

Pat Rice, manager of Mayfair Shopping Centre, said the Woodward's project is expected to be completed by year's end and other expansion at the shopping centre will be finished by July, 1975.

Total cost of the Mayfair expansion is $4 million. In addition to the second Woodward's store, the expansion involves enclosing and air-conditioning the mall and constructing 10 new stores.

The present Woodward's store will be expanded about 12 fet towards Douglas Street to enlarge the food floor.

Contractor is P. B. Ford of Vancouver, employing Victoria workers.

The first stage of the project involves ripping up concrete at the north end parking lot in preparation for pile driving for the parkade and the second Woodward's store. The store will handle low-priced items.

Q. Have any books been written about pianist Oscar Levant? T.B.

A. The Public Library lists no books on Levant, but he has written three autobiographies: A Smattering of Ignorance (Doubleday, 1959), Memoirs of an Amnesiac (Putnam's, 1965) and The Unimportance of Being Oscar (Putnam's, 1968). The last one is still in print.

NIGHT CLERK ROBBED BY ROCK-WIELDING BOY

A night clerk in the Craigflower Motel was hit over the head with a rock late Tuesday just before a juvenile fled with about $50 in small bills.

Esquimalt police said the clerk, Byrne Currie, was uninjured.

The juvenile, described as a boy between 14 and 16, took the money from the office of the motel at 101 Island Highway while Currie was not looking.

Currie was hit when he turned to look at the boy.

City School Board Feels 'Hog-Tied'

Education Minister Eileen Dailly has supplied $21 million to put more teachers into B.C. schools this fall, but she's not providing money to build more classrooms to put them in.

That point sparked anger and frustration from trustees and administrators at a Greater-Victoria school board committee meeting Tuesday.

"Your administration is finding itself in great difficulties," schools superintendent Jake Longmore told the board. "Your administration feels hog-tied in this whole situation."

Longmore said the education department has refused to allow the board to buy six portable classrooms to handle an overflow student population at Gordon Head elementary school in September. Portables from five other schools will have to be moved to Gordon Head, he said.

The refusal is because the department is using a 32 students to one teacher ratio in determining when new classrooms are needed in the district.

The school board, like Dailly, has committed itself to bringing down the student-teacher ratio to around to 28 to one this fall.

The board feels it needs more classrooms to put these smaller classes into. The education department, by its 32-to-one ratio, says Victoria district has plenty of classroom space.

"This bureaucracy is more restrictive and bureaucratic than anything we've seen in the last 10 years," board chairman Peter Bunn charged.

Bunn said that if the problem wasn't cleared up by September the board should send down a delegation to "raise bloody murder about this thing."

"The hypocrisy of (Dailly) telling the people through paid advertisements that they are dedicated to lowering the pupil-teacher ratio," when they refuse to allow more classrooms to be built, said Trustee Walter Donald.

Les Canty, the department's administration superintendent, said the 32-to-one ratio for new classrooms wont be changed "until we see what form this improved student-teacher ratio will take."

Canada Scores First Victory

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AFP) — Canada won its first game Tuesday in the final round of the world amateur basketball championships, defeating Spain 86-73.

The Canadians showed superior team and individual skills as they shot their way to victory after running up a 52-41 half-time lead.

The Canadians lost 115-95 Monday to the United States.

The Russians led 46-45 at the half.

The United States remained undefeated in the final round with an 83-70 triumph over Cuba. In a consolation game, Czechoslovakia whipped the Republic of Central Africa 113-70.

Cuba trailed 47-41 after the first half and 61-53 later in the game until Kelly set up the three baskets by Lucas, who led the U.S. in scoring with 22 points.

Dragan Kicanovic paced the Yugoslavs with 19 points and Alexander Belov had 19 for the Russians.

The U.S. and Yugoslavia each has 3-0 records and meet Saturday in a key game.

Youth Rowing Standards Altered in Mid-Stream

Sure, there's often no substitute for the value of motivational techniques in sport — athletes can be driven to remarkable heights at times, and often far beyond their normal scope.

But how about the unplanned challenge, the bureaucratic screw-up, the virtual changing of the goal posts in mid-game — is this type of insolence part and parcel of the master plan?

Brentwood rowing coach Tony Carr isn't too sure, but sooner or later he intends to find out.

The issue revolves around the bid by Brentwood School rowers, and others across the Dominion, to qualify for the world youth rowing championships in Ratzburg, Germany, Aug. 1-4, a bid that will either bear fruit, or fail, this weekend at Burnaby.

A few short weeks ago, Carr and his Brentwood crews were happily confident of at least a measure of success. For hadn't the Brentwood eight just won the Canadian schoolboy championships at St. Ctharines, Ont.; and more to the point, in winning, hadn't the Island crew beaten the qualifying time for the world youth event by over three seconds; and finally wasn't all that seemingly was needed was for the youngsters to do it again — race the 1,500 metre course in under 4:38.0 — and the invitation would gladly be accepted?

Besides, there would also be other events in which Islanders might qualify — the coxed four, straight four, coxed pair, pair without cox — and so a special training program was set up.

The boys were asked to forego their vacations, remain at school and work at their rowing. Then perhaps they could represent Canada. A fond hope indeed.

All Was Fine, Until . . .

It was all part of Game Plan '76, the forerunner of the Montreal Olympics, and what better way to build up a championship unit, or at least a competitive nucleus of rowers, or hopefully, both?

So, everything was rosy — on the surface. The youngsters went to work, so did the coaching staff, and in the words of Carr, the Brentwood mentor, "I thought many of the qualifying times were within reach."

As for the eights, Carr figured this was easily the best bet as they already had bettered the given standard, and only had to repeat to qualify.

Now enter the bureaucratic process in action.

Just over a week or so ago, Carr was informed by Sports Canada, which governs the Canadian Rowing Association (at least the funding) that there had been a re-assessment and that all qualifying standards previously announced were now outdated, and in actual fact all the times were reduced by five full seconds.

In the matter of the eights, the new qualifying time now would be 4:33.0, and not 4:38.0

The thinking behind the new order is that now the times are more closely related to the times under which European crews must qualify. Which sounds reasonable enough, until it is explained that this isn't exactly the case either.

Because now, the simple fact is that Canadian youngsters, to qualify for the world, will have to be faster than their English counterparts just to get there.

'A Kick in the Behind'

Carr isn't simply angry. He's aghast. He doesn't feel it at all fair to the kids, who gave up their summer when they could have been out working, to change the rules in the middle of the game. Because, quite frankly, some of the standards now may well be unattainable. "This is especially hard on the younger fellows," he said. "Sure it was a blow—a kick in the behind, because we had been moving along very well. thought the original times were very achievable. Now, I'm concerned for the kids."

There's another reason too, and it concerns the otherwise excellent Burnaby course.

"It's a slow course," explained Carr, "because of its features. It's shallow and it has a boggy bottom. Boats don't flow as freely. Past competitions there have confirmed that times are slower, and I would say by about two or three seconds."

There is one thing in the rowers' favor however. And it concerns everyone, because this is not a spectator event, per se. It is for rowers only, and events will be held early in the mornings and in the evenings only.

"They are trying to get perfect, windless conditions," explained Carr. "Which is good from our point of view."

As to how the Island rowers will do, Carr was philosophical in light of what he thought was an unfair ruling, especially once training had begun.

"I think they (the eights) could just edge under the time, if they come up with their very best performance. If they don't do it, they won't go."

Then he added:

"I understand there's an eight coming out from Eastern Canada. "You can bet we'll do our damnedest to beat them."

The inference was obvious. The motivation, built-in.

Pearce Pierces Stamps

REGINA (CP) — Backup quarterback Bob Pearce directed a 75-yard touchdown march in the dying minutes of the final quarter Tuesday night to give the Saskatchewan Roughriders a 19-16 win over Calgary Stampeders in a Western Football Conference exhibition game.

Pearce, who faces competition from four newcomers for the role of understudy to veteran quarterback Ron Lancaster, was lack-lustre in the first quarter as Calgary piled up a 9-0 lead.

But Pearce took over in the fourth quarter and brought Saskatchewan from behind. The winning touchdown, by fullback George Reed on a four-yard run with 51 seconds left, came after Pearce had put together a series of passes to wide receiver Steve Mazurak.

Calgary's first touchdown came on a 45-yard pass play from Peter Liske to Rudy Linterman. Larry Robinson missed the convert but a few minutes later made a 48-yard goal to give Calgary a 9-0 first quarter lead.

Then newcomer Randy Mattingly took over as quarterback for Saskatchewan in the the second quarter and soon hit Leif Petersen for a touchdown on a 23- yard pass play.

Ralph Galloway missed the convert but added a 30-yard field goal to tie the score at half-time.

Joe Pisarcik acted as Calgary quarterback for the second half.

In the third quarter it was Lancaster against Liske, with the latter coming out on top as the only scoring was an 11-yard field goal and a 26-yard single by Robinson.

Mattingly was back for Saskatchewan early in the fourth quarter, again facing Pisarcik, but Saskatchewan got nowhere until Pearce took over.

Brian Berg kicked a 42-yard field goal for Saskatchewan that was nullified by a 10-yard Robinson field goal.

B.C. Junior Hockey Revolt 'Quite Strange' Says Temple

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

The British Columbia Junior Hockey League's apparent dissatisfaction with the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association "seems quite strange" to Ivan Temple, the provincial body's secretary-registrar.

The president of the BCJHL said in Vancouver earlier this week that his league will attempt to withdraw from the BCAHA's jurisdiction and operate under the wing of the Western Canada Hockey League.

Dr. Arnold Lowden of Penticton also said the BCJHL is "being cheated" by the BCAHA and pointed to the provincial body's opposition to the BCJHL's attempt to expand into Spokane.

Lowden also felt the BCAHA's decision to create another junior "A" league on the west coast was another example of the BCAHA undermining the BCJHL.

"It's all very funny," said Temple on Tuesday. "First of all, the Western Canada League is not a branch of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

"Secondly, CAHA regulations stipulate that no new American team can be accepted in a (Canadian) league that plays for a national championship.

"Thirdly, if BCJHL doesn't operate under the jurisdiction of the BCAHA, and consequently the CAHA, then the league would not be eligible for any draft money, nor would they be eligible to compete for the Centennial Cup (Canadian championship)."

"When the West Coast league was formed, Dr. Lowden said he had no objection to the new league. It's recorded in the minutes of the meeting."

Temple said Spokane's entry into the B.C. League would require approval from the BCAHA, the CAHA and the U.S. Amateur Hockey Association. That permission hadn't been given nor, he indicated, was it sought.

"I can't figure out what they're trying to prove," he concluded.

Brentwood Oarsmen In Trials

Thirteen students from Brentwood College School will be competing in the Canada youth rowing trials at Burnaby Saturday and Sunday.

Crews which meet qualifying standards as set by the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen will be selected to compete in the world youth rowing championships at Ratzburg, Germany, Aug 1-4.

The Brentwood eight-oared crew has one change from the unit which earlier this year won the Canadian schoolboy championships at St. Catharines, Ont. Mark Phillips, 17, of Dawson Creek, replaces Darrel Thierman of Edmonton. Thierman does not qualify because he is over the age limit of 18. Other members of the eight are Bill Newell, Qualicum; Graham Foreman, West Vancouver; Cameron Kring, Victoria; Murray Reynolds, Edmonton; David Holme, Vancouver; Brodie Cupples, Victoria; stroke Mike Wiggins, Victoria; cox Geoff Briggs, Prince George.

Brentwood will enter a coxed four using Bill Newell from the eight with Gerald Van Stolk, Prince George; Martin Lacey, Calgary; Allan Wood, Saanich; and Dale Bannerman, Mackenzie.

The other members of the eight will also compete in the coxed pair, the straight four and the straight pair events.

Adanac Rally Just Too Late

VANCOUVER — Coquitlam Adanacs outscored Vancouver Burrards 6-3 in the final period Tuesday night but still lost their Western Lacrosse Association game 16-7.

In the first WLA action in three weeks, Burrards grabbed a 6-1 first-period lead and then scored seven straight unanswered goals in the second period to lead 13-1.

The win moved the Burrards four points ahead of the Adanacs and Victoria Shamrocks, who play league-leading New Westminster Salmonbellies in Victoria tonight.

Jim Fisher Too Hot For Hunters

Playing his first game in more than two weeks, Fisher came up with a sparkling, 45-stop display to backstop Esquimalt Teamsters' 17-6 victory over Saanich in B.C. Junior "B" Lacrosse League action at the Sports Centre.

Victory moved Esquimalt past Vancouver Burrards and into first place in the 10-team league.

Classic Action In Rain

Despite delays and a rain-dampened court, Ted Davies and Roger Skillings both gave a classic display of serve-and-volley tennis at its finest when the Victoria City championships continued Tuesday night.

In the end, it was defending champion Davies, somewhat irked at being seeded only fifth, who broke Skillings' service at 4-4 in the third set to win a 6-3, 6-7, 6-4 thriller.

Youngsters gave some of the oldsters a rough time in the women's singles. Top-seeded Brenda Cameron of the Racquet Club of Victoria downed experienced Nancy Hill of Oak Bay 6-2, 6-2 and Oak Bay's Wendy Barlow beat Vivien Davies of Glen Meadows 6-0, 6-2.

There should have been a third junior through as well when Oak Bay's 15-year-old Nina Bland battled for over two hours with steady clubmate Kathy Metcalfe and led 3-0 in the third set. But Nina, getting tired of the long rallies, lost her patience — and she lost six straight games and the match 2-6, 7-6, 6-3.

Tuesday's championship flight results:

WOMEN
Singles
Brenda Cameron defeated Nancy Hill, 6-2, 6-2; Wendy Barlow defeated Vivien Davies, 6-0, 6-2; Kathy Metcalf defeated Nina Bland, 2-6, 7-6, 6-3.

TENNIS RESULTS DEADLINE NEAR

Time is running out for all those with first-round matches still to play in the Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis Tournament.

All first-round matches in the men's and women's and boys' and girls' singles events have to be completed and the postcard containing the result has to be in to the Times office by this Saturday night. All matches that are unplayed or unreported will be defaulted after Saturday.

Results have been coming in but there are still more than 20 first-round matches not played. So, in the next few days, get cracking!

RCV Youngsters Win in Richmond

RICHMOND — Three players from the Racquet Club of Victoria scored wins when the Greater Vancouver Open junior tennis championships began here Tuesday.

Vince MacDonald posted three victories. He beat Dave Wittig of Richmond 3-6, 6-1, 6-2 and Dave Miachika of Hollyburn Country Club 6-2, 6-2 in the under-16 singles, then nipped Mike Carnsew of Hollyburn 5-7, 6-3, 6-3 in the under-14 event.

Andrie Levey downed Ruth Beck of Western Indoor Tennis Club 6-4, 6-1 in the girls' under-16 singles and Colin Ayers split two games, beating Steven Vogler of Richmond 6-1, 6-4 in the under-12 division and losing 7-5, 6-4 to Chris Forrester of Vancouver in the under-14 group.

The tournament ends Saturday.

All-Star Verdict Tonight

Times News Services

While each side blamed the other for holding up negotiations aimed at ending a strike of National Football League players, the fate of the 1974 college all-star game hung in the balance.

And Chicago Tribune Charities, sponsors of the all-star game, said it would hold a news conference at 6 p.m. PDT tonight to announce the fate of the 1974 game.

An ultimatum had been issued Monday by the agency of the Chicago newspaper giving both sides in the dispute 48 hours to guarantee that the July 26 game will be played without interference.

Early today, the National Football League Management Council, bargaining agency for the club owners, repeated that it was ready to resume negotiations and claimed that the NFL Players Association (NFLPA), which went on strike July 1, was stalling.

The NFLPA, on the other hand, said, in effect, the opposite.

The union wants management to come to the bargaining table with counter-proposals to the 63 demands it made when talks broke off 10 days before the strike started.

"There will not be any meeting between the owners and the players because Jim Scearce, the federal mediator, said he couldn't assure any kind of meeting except on Friday, so there won't be a meeting," Ed Garvey, NFLPA executive director, said in an interview early today.

But John Thompson, executive director of the owners' bargaining union, said it was "totally and grossly unfair" for Garvey to say he won't meet until Friday.

Thompson said a Tuesday negotiating session fell through because Garvey failed to respond in time to repeated telephone calls from the mediator.

The union's 63 demands include the so-called "freedom issues," which call for players to have the right to negotiate with any team they wish and to veto trades, an end to reserve and waiver clauses and a curb on the disciplinary power of coaches, owners and the league commissioner to impose fines.

Player pickets marched near the eight NFL camps which were open by Tuesday.

Gibbard Scores Seven for Saanich

Saanich Charman Pacific Realty tumbled Nanaimo Falcons 18-11 Tuesday night in a Vancouver Island Intermediate "A" Lacrosse Leaguee game at Pearkes Arena.

On the same floor, Fullers Lake nipped Saanich Victoria-West 10-9 in a Vancouver Island Intermediate "B" League game. Harry Judge sparked Fullers Lake with three goals and Geoff Hass topped Saanich marksmen with four.

City Quartets Reach Final

NELSON — Vancouver Island rink skipped by Claire Duncan of Victoria, June Randall of the Racquet Club and Courtenay's Olive Acorn were among the 16 rinks to qualify for the "A" division women's championship in the 30th annual Nelson Summer curling bonspiel.

Seven rinks from Alberta, five from Saskatchewan and only four from British Columbia qualified for the men's championship.

Some Island Elk Herds Reach Huntable Numbers

Some rambling notes along the trail:

According to a Vancouver Island Wildlife Association committee, elk have now reached a huntable population level in some parts of the Island . . . Committee members recommend the fish and wildlife branch set up a permit system to harvest the surplus animals . . . They further suggest permits should be issued only to B.C. residents, the season should last as long as the season for deer and that only bulls be taken . . . Perhaps if more conscientious hunters were in the field, it would also serve to curb the poaching of these animals.

Fish and wildlife clubs on the Island are becoming concerned over the lack of information available concerning the Howard Paish and Associates land-use study on the northern end of the Island . . . After the long fight to get a moratorium placed on certain parts of the area, it would seem appropriate to include public input in a study of this nature . . . And what about the current status of that highway the provincial government was planning to push right through the heart of the area?

MacMillan Bloedel has been accused lately of indulging in what has been called "eco-porn" . . . Magazine-style inserts in papers and mounds of news releases extolling the virtues of harvesting timber on a multiple-use basis are being churned out regularly by their Vancouver headquarters . . . Fair enough . . . It goes to show they are sensitive to the current public mood . . . And, as a form of corporate-public communication, it isn't bad.

One of the many campaigns deserving public support right now, if not sooner, is the proposal by the Okanagan Similkameen Parks Society to have the boundaries of Cathedral Park extended . . . This unique area of high-country lakes, located roughly between Manning Park and Osoyoos along the B.C.-Washington boundary, was portrayed on B.C. Tel directories two years ago . . . Enlarging the park from 18,000 to 100,000 acres would take in campsites along the Ashnola River, Ewart Creek Valley and a Bighorn sheep range, Wall Creek and its Alpine meadows as well as many other desirable features . . . Further information is available by writing the Okanagan Similkameen Parks Society, Box 787, Summerland, B.C.

Outdoorsmen are reminded that a fire hazard still exists in the forested and slash-covered areas of the Island . . . The rain hasn't helped much . . . Anyone wishing to report a fire this year only has to dial "O" and ask for the toll-free number of Zenith 5555 . . . This line is being manned round-the-clock by forest service personnel.

Had a fairly successful trip to Ranger Lake in Sooke at the weekend with Times staffer Pete Medwid . . . Mixed bag included both rainbow and cutthroat trout, all taken on flies despite some time spent spin-fishing . . . Included in the take was a 17½-inch cutthroat landed by this writer . . . Our thanks to Pete for manoeuvering the canoe around a multi-branched log which the cutthroat appeared determined to wrap my line around . . . 'Til later, tight lines.

Pro Baseball Looks at Victoria Again

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Professional baseball is taking another look at Victoria.

A new entry in the eight-team league this year, Frasers may move if they can't get a better deal from the parks department in New Westminster.

"It's anything but definite," Taylor said. "We're just looking and we hope we won't have to move. But if we can't get more co-operation from the parks board, we'll have to."

In any case, Frasers aren't likely to shift this year despite an attendance average of about 400 a game (1,500 is the break-even point) and a slow start on the field.

New Westminster has a 7-16 won-lost record and is last in the four-team Western Division behind leading Portland Mavericks, Seattle Rainiers and Bellingham Dodgers. The Eastern Division is made up of Eugene Emeralds, Walla Walla Padres, Lewiston Broncs and Tri-Cities Ports.

Taylor blames the losing record for the small crowds but insists Frasers can survive financially.

"We knew we weren't going to break even the first year," he said, "and the financial backing of this club is such that there is no way it will fold."

Frasers are bankrolled by Taylor's father-in-law, William Forest of Roseburg, Ore. It cost about $25,000 to get the club in operation for the 84-game schedule that opened June 18 and ends Aug. 31.

Taylor and Manning, 23-year-old graduates of a sports administration course at Ohio University, would be happy if the New Westminster parks board took care of a couple of glaring infield problems and allowed them to sell billboard advertising on the outfield fence.

"Teams coming in to play us complain about the condition of the infield," Taylor said. "And the perimeter where it meets the outfield grass is nine feet too close to home plate. Infielders end up standing in the outfield."

He said Frasers' contract with the city requires the club to look after pre-game maintenance, like lining the field, and any work beyond that is the responsibility of the parks board.

"We've been offered a rental rate of 12 per cent or $100 a game, whichever is more, and if the city handles the ticket sales, it would be 17 per cent," he explained.

Frasers pay 10 per cent or $100 at Queen's Park Stadium, but the club must provide park personnel and hire a groundskeeper. That would all be provided by the city if the team moved here.

"The field and lighting here are far superior to New Westminster," Taylor added.

Also being considered are Capilano Stadium in Vancouver. Frasers have scheduled three games there this summer—or Spokane. League approval for a move would pose no problem.

"Some clubs are shaky about using the ferries, but other than that, the league doesn't seem to be against the idea," Taylor said.

This marks the second time in two years the Northwest League has considered a Victoria franchise. The Tri-Cities club nearly moved here, but stayed put after new management took over.

Deluge of Runs Boosts Yanks

By The Associated Press

Suddenly the runs are coming for New York Yankees, but manager Bill Virdon says he doesn't know why.

The Yankees, who scored only 19 runs in 11 American League baseball games not long ago, have produced 45 in their last five outings, including Tuesday's 8-2 win over Kansas City Royals.

The runs helped Canadian-born rookie Dave Pagan to his first victory as a major league starter.

"I wish I knew," said Virdon, when asked to explain the scoring splurge. "Whatever it is, I'd keep doing it."

In Tuesday's other American League games, Boston Red Sox nipped Texas Rangers 2-1, Milwaukee Brewers shaded Chicago White Sox 6-5, Minnesota Twins trimmed Detroit Tigers 3-2 in 11 innings, Oakland A's blanked Cleveland Indians 7-0 before firing two coaches, and Baltimore Orioles beat California Angels 3-1.

In the National League, relief pitcher Mike Marshall made his 58th appearance of the season to finish the last three innings of an 8-4 Los Angeles Dodger victory over Philadelphia Phillies; Cincinnati Reds beat Chicago Cubs 8-5, Houston Astros downed St. Louis Cardinals 5-2, Montreal Expos edged San Francisco Giants 5-4, Pittsburgh Pirates nipped Atlanta Braves 5-4 and San Diego Padres shaded New York Mets 5-4.

Pagan, 23, who was in the Yankee bullpen earlier this season, was making his third start. He scattered six hits, walked five and struck out seven.

The Yankees jumped on the Royals for six runs in the first inning, four of them on the first grand-slam home run of third baseman Graig Nettles' career.

Jim Hunter pitched a three-hitter and Joe Rudi drove in three runs to lead the A's past the Indians.

After the game, Oakland manager Alvin Dark announced the firing of coaches Vern Hoscheit and Irv Noren.

Dark said he wanted his own coaches and had been given permission to make the change by owner Charles Finley.

Hoscheit, the bullpen coach, and Noren, the third base coach, were holdovers from the staff of Dick Williams, who led the A's to their second World Series victory in a row last fall and then quit.

Dark said he was replacing the two with Bobby Winkles, recently replaced by Williams as manager of California Angels, and Bobby Hoffman, who has been manager of Oakland's farm team at Lewiston, Idaho.

It was not immediately clear what assignments Winkles and Hoffman would receive.

There was speculation that Noren would join Williams at Anaheim. Noren had a clash with Dark earlier in the season when the Oakland manager accused him of giving the wrong signals.

From Dust To Dust For Pagan

But the dust of a major league infield smells sweet to the rookie pitcher with New York Yankees.

Pagan, a 23-year-old right-hander, recorded his first major league win in his third start with the Yankees Tuesday night, pitching a six-hitter as New York beat Kansas City Royals 8-2 in an American League baseball game.

Pagan grew up on a farm near Snowden, Sask., a rural community not far from Nipawin, his birthplace.

"I was an outcast on the farm," Pagan recalled Tuesday. "I was allergic to dust. I still am.

"I used to go out to the barn and throw baseball against the wall. I played by myself. A bad pitch was a single and four bad ones was a run."

COSMOS ADVANCE TO B.C. FINALS

Brian Martin scattered three Optimist hits to pick up the pitching victory and Allan Bassett led batting with a fourth-inning double that brought in the insurance run.

Mel Nelson Must Be Feeling Better

Mel Nelson of Mike's Sports Shop had reason to feel better about his pitching performance Tuesday, but Royal Oak Sporting Goods didn't.

The southpaw confided last week he wasn't too happy with recent efforts, but had to be feeling better after spinning a three-hit, 1-0 shutout against Royal Oak at Central Park.

It was Nelson's ninth decision against five losses.

Nelson lost his no-hit bid when Randy Benn singled with two out in the fifth inning. Terry Hoy, with a single in the sixth, and Benn, again, in the seventh, accounted for the only other hits off Nelson.

Dale, Sydney Rolling

Times News Services

The women's and junior girls' champions of Victoria are playing miles apart but both hoped to continue in the same direction in Pacific Northwest Golf Association tournaments today.

City champion Dale Shaw of Glen Meadows faced the big challenge in Seattle, where the PNGA women's championship is being played, while 15-year-old Sydney Thomson was stirring interest in Spokane, site of the junior championship.

Miss Shaw was to face defending champion Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver today after storming to an easy win Tuesday. Dale defeated Lee Harbour of Seattle 7 and 5 in her opening match while Miss Palmer posted an identical victory over Electra Koeniger of Aberdeen, Wash.

Miss Shaw qualified for the championship with an 81 Monday, finishing six strokes behind medallist Connie Guthrie of Spokane.

Miss Thomson also was impressive Tuesday with a 6 and 5 triumph over Susan Berger of Bay City, Ore.

Sydney qualified with an 81, two strokes behind medallist Sue Jacobsen of Portland. Miss Jacobsen had to go 22 holes before toppling Nancy Peck of Eugene in her first-round match.

Four other Victoria-area girls missed the championship but made it to the second flight and won Tuesday. Kathy Little of Gorge Vale, who scored a 91 in the qualifying round, defeated Nancy McNeilly of Seattle; Mary McKinnon (92) of Uplands downed Jane Coburn of Seattle 3 and 1; Tracy Pierpoint (97) of Uplands defeated Gabrielle Star of Oswego, Ore., 6 and 5, and Jean McKinnon of Uplands (99) beat Sheila Wingham of Vancouver 4 and 3.

In the men's PNGA championship at Redmond, Wash., Mike Reid of Seattle sank a hole-in-one on the 167-yard fifth Tuesday and went on to claim medallist honors with a 36-hole total of 139. The 20-year-old Brigham Young student had a two-under 70 Tuesday after opening with a 69 on the difficult Sahalee course.

Victoria Juniors Trailing

CHILLIWACK — Victoria's junior golfers have to play a "catch-up" game if they hope to win berths on the four-man British Columbia interprovincial team.

Erik Hutton of Chilliwack fired a three-under 68 Tuesday to share the halfway lead with Vancouver's Joe Limoli. Both are at 140, and seven strokes up on Victoria's top prospect, City champ Jim Rutledge.

First-round leaders all faltered on a day that saw only Hutton, Cowichan's Laurie Peet (69), Dave Rands of Cedar Hill (70), Sandy Harper of Nanaimo (70) and Limoli (70) turn in sub-par scores.

Co-leaders with 69s on the first day were Kelly Murray of Marine Drive, Mark Forrest of Beach Grove and Castlegar's Jim Perhudoss. Forrest had a 74, Merray a 75 and Perhudoss soared to a 79 Tuesday.

Shero Set To Stay With Flyers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Fred Shero of Philadelphia Flyers said Tuesday night he expects to return next season as coach of the National Hockey League team, despite a $100,000 offer to jump to the World Hockey Association's Minnesota Fighting Saints.

"I'd say that it is now likely that I will remain in Philadelphia," said the 48-year-old Shero.

Shero is on the second year of a three-year contract with the Flyers.

Fear Instilled By Weiskopf

LYTHAM St. ANNES, England (AP) — Tom Weiskopf, the American golfer who used to sulk when things went wrong, was calm today as he opened his defence of the British Open title.

"The man who is going to win over these next four days will be a patient kind of fellow," said Weiskopf.

"I don't worry so much any more, I don't get hung up and I feel good," said Weiskopf, who has yet to win a 1974 tournament but claims his game is sharper than it has been for years.

The third favorite to win his second straight British championship at odds of 12-1, Weiskopf is a player the 153 other competitors fear.

Tony Jacklin, who became the first Briton to win the home championship for 18 years at Lytham in 1969 and went on to add the United States Open crown in 1970, picked Weiskopf to repeat his 1973 triumph over the par 71 course.

"Tom is playing better than anyone I've ever seen play in practice for a major championship," Jacklin said.

STUKUS PARTS WITH JETS

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association and general manager Annis Stukus have parted company, Stukus said Tuesday.

The team has been sold to a community-based group in Winnipeg, and Stukus said he understands he was to be offered a job with the new owners as a public relations man — a job he said he was not interested in.

He is considering returning to the west coast and going back into radio work.

Sweet & Sour Tuna

1 can (19 oz.) pineapple chunks
¼ c. Rogers' Golden Syrup
2 tbsp. cornstarch
1 chicken bouillon cube dissolved in 1 c. hot water
2 tbsp. vinegar
¼ tsp. salt
2 tsp. soy sauce
2 c. green pepper strips, ½" wide
2 cans (6½ oz. each) solid pack tuna, drained and broken in chunks
2 tbsp. butter or margarine
2 cans (4 oz. each) chow mein noodles

Drain pineapple, reserving syrup. Combine Rogers' Golden Syrup and cornstarch. Stir in bouillon, pineapple syrup, vinegar, soy sauce and salt. Cook and stir until mixture thickens. Add pineapple, peppers, tuna and butter, and heat five minutes, stirring occasionally. Serve over noodles. Serves six.

Eskimos May Lose Physical Excellence

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Eskimos may not be able to retain their physical excellence as the encroachment of white civilization forces them into a sedentary lifestyle, Dr. Roy Shephard of the University of Toronto said Tuesday.

Studies last year of the heart and respiratory fitness of 223 Eskimos living in Igloolik, N.W.T., showed their aerobic capacity—the ability to transfer oxygen to the muscles—as substantially above the average of people in a white community, he told the third international Symposium on circumpolar health.

Eskimo hunters can transfer 65 ml. of oxygen from the atmosphere to their muscles each minute for each kilogram of body weight, said Dr. Shephard, a physiologist. This was on a par with good athletes anywhere.

Although it is below the capacity of top international athletes, it is well above the capacity of sedentary white males living in cities who have an aerobic capacity of about 48 ml. of oxygen per kilogram of body weight, he said.

Studies also showed that sedentary Eskimos had a higher aerobic capacity than sedentary whites. As well, Eskimo girls were usually stronger than the average for white boys.

Dr. Shephard said it appears "the physical demands of the chase have played a role in developing fitness."

CONTINUOUSLY ACTIVE.

Moreover, Eskimos might have difficulty conserving body heat while at rest and were therefore forced to be continuously active. Other factors such as evolution through survival of the fittest, genetics and a high protein diet may have contributed to this fitness level. But it was more likely the difference between Eskimos and whites "can be explained more simply as a result of vigorous training."

Unhappily, hunting is a declining interest in the community, said Dr. Shephard. He hoped to do further studies to determine if the villagers lose their fitness when they become less active.

Another physiologist, Dr. Don Rennie of the University of Buffalo, said Canadian Eskimos in the Far North are probably in better physical condition than the Eskimos he has studied in Alaska.

This was because the Alaskan Eskimos have been more influenced by white society and have abandoned more of their traditional lifestyle.

They're Just Freezing

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Some women who freeze to death are thought by police to have been sexually assaulted because their clothes are in disorder or removed all together, Swedish researchers said Tuesday.

However, the victims have removed their own clothes during a period between a dazed condition and total unconsciousness when the victims have strong heat sensations, A. B. Wedin of Stockholm told delegates to the third international symposium on circumpolar health.

Women draw up their skirts and underskirts first, then remove different items of clothing and some undress until completely naked, said Wedin, of the Research Institute of the Swedish Defence Department.

Sometimes women are found with their arms extended, pressed against the snow as if they wanted to cool themselves with maximum contact with the snow, he said.

Thirty-five such occurences were reported last year by the National Swedish Police Board which is responsible for mountain rescues.

Men also experience the same sensations, he said, they take off their head gear, loosen their belts and draw down their trousers.

Wedin said some of these women may have been saved if they had been taken quickly to hospital. However they were left lying in their frozen condition because they were thought to be dead and because police officers didn't want to destroy evidence of what appeared to be a criminal assault.

Nutrition Findings In North Criticized

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — One Northwest Territories doctor says the federal government may be on the verge of throwing millions of dollars away in useless nutrition programs for northern native people.

Dr. William Sutherland, a general practitioner in Ranklin Inlet on Hudson Bay, says the findings of the federal health department's Nutrition Canada report that folic acid and vitamin deficiencies are widespread among northern natives is not apparent to him in his practice.

Before the federal government "spends another $10 million to correct this supposed problem, there better be more research to prove it," he said in an interview Tuesday at the third international symposium on Circumpolar Health.

Sutherland, the only doctor for about 3,000 residents of Ranklin Inlet and seven other small northern communities, said about 100 children are flown each year from his area to metropolitan hospitals to be treated for various disorders.

But the hospitals almost never reported back to him that the children required supplements of folic acid, an essential for producing red blood cells.

Nor do the hospitals report any cases of scurvy as a result of deficiencies of vitamin CN although the Nutrition Canada report says that scurvy is a problem, he said.

Sutherland advised health officials to take blood tests in the north and analyse them before acting on the findings of the $2.5 million nutrition report published last fall by the health department.

Marion Smith, a pediatrician with the federal health department, told the meeting the report had found vitamin and folic acid deficiencies among 2,200 Indians and Eskimos in the total study of 20,000 Canadians.

Although these findings may not be representative because of the small sample, Smith said the nutritional shortcomings of northern people made for a serious situation which needed more study and eventual federal action.

The study also found weight deficiencies among pre-school children, especially Eskimos, and iron deficiences in all age and sex groups.

However, Sutherland said it was not known what caused the iron deficiences. The Eskimos in his region ate plenty of meat and protein from caribou, seal and fish which is rich in iron.

Sutherland, who has practised in the region for two years, said the mortality rate for infants there was two to three times that of white children in the south. However, the high mortality rate could be attributed to factors other than nutrition.

Those children who live "are stronger and healthier than me."

The main health problems in the area are accidents, viral chest infections, anemia from the iron deficiencies and bad teeth from eating too much sugar, he said.

ASTROLOGERS SEE STARS, SET SESSION

TORONTO (CP) — Members of a Toronto-based astrologers' group consulted their charts and the stars before deciding on Sept. 17 to 23 as the most favorable dates for the first national Canadian astrology convention, a spokesman said Tuesday.

Robin Armstrong, co-ordinator for the Canadian Independent Astrologers Order, said the convention will include seminars, workshops, debates, discussion groups and classes in astrology.

More than 500 "students of astrology" and 100 astrologers and teachers from the Toronto area are registered with the order, Mr. Armstrong said.

Great Air Dashers Rest Before Hop to Kamloops

PENTICTON (CP) — Thirty-five of 37 teams flying vintage aircraft in the great Belvedere air dash from Montreal to Vancouver touched down in Penticton Tuesday night for some relaxation and rest.

Two aircraft bringing up the rear were spending the night in Cranbrook and were to join the others here today before moving on to Kamloops and Hope.

The Hope stop will be an overnight stop with the dash moving on to Chilliwack for a timing stop Thursday. The planes were to arrive in Vancouver sometime Thursday.

First to land here was Richard Hawker of Chicago.

The two tail-enders in Cranbrook were the only all-woman team, Ruthanne Koyich and her co-pilot Eileen Haffey of Grande Praire, Alta., who flew their 1940 Tiger Moth biplane to Montreal to start the cross-Canada race.

The other tail-ender was Dr. Craig Loveys of Grand Falls, Nfld., who is not only making the dash but history as he jockeys his home-built Volmer amphibian, marking the first Canadian coast-to-coast flight in a home-built aircraft.

The pilots, from Canada and the United States, are not in a speed race but in a competition of timing between stops. They are awarded demerit points for breaches of regulations — such as never leaving the ground with the motor leaking.

The pilots range in age from the mid-20s to 63, the oldest being Hawker, a former American Airlines pilot.

Three British Columbia teams are in the dash. They are Roy Baron and Larry Pollard of Kamloops; John Bates and Donald Lurkins, also of Kamloops; and Dr. John Hall and Ray Bamford of Castlegar.

Contestants are competing for such citations as best-dressed barnstormer and worst navigator, although the team with the best time will be awarded a trophy.

Opium-Field Bombing Article 'Sophistry'

ANKARA (UPI) — Information Minister Orhan Birgit says a suggestion by New York columnist Pete Hamill that the United States bomb Turkey's opium poppy fields was "unparalleled sophistry."

Birgit said he would invite Hammil to Turkey to see the situation for himself.

"I was surprised and startled by the article in the New York Post calling for the bombing of the opium poppy growing areas in Turkey."

Turkish newspapers headlined their reports on Hamill's column in Monday's Post by criticizing Turkey for lifting its 18-month ban on cultivation of the poppy. U.S. officials have said the Turkish crop, grown for pharmaceutical uses, was the source of 80 per cent of the heroin sold illegally in the United States.

"The columnist claims that 90,000 Turkish peasants have declared war on the United States by planting the poppy," Birgit said. "The whole idea is an anachronism and an unparalleled sophistry."

Birgit said he would write to the editor-in-chief of the Post inviting Hamill to visit Turkey.

"The columnist will see for himself on the spot that the 90,000 Turkish peasants, he wants to bomb do not wish to war with the United States," Birgit said. "They are cultivating the poppy for their own livelihood and they only wish it to be used in the pharmaceutical industry.

"The peasants will present bouquets of opium poppies to the author of the article and they will welcome him with their traditional hospitality."

3 Canadians Face Charges

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Three Canadians accused of participating in an international cocaine smuggling ring entered pleas of not guilty Tuesday in U.S. District Court here.

The three are charged with conspiracy to import and distribute cocaine, a spokesman for the U.S. attorneys office said.

The Canadians — James Stafford, 24, of Calgary and Craig Pittman, 28, and Blair Scarratt, 26, both of Vancouver — were arrested in San Francisco May 3 on a complaint and warrant issued from the Eastern Washington Federal Judical District.

France, Bonn Attack Economic Woes

BONN (WP) — West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and French President Valery Giscard D'Estaing agreed Tuesday that the European Economic Community should put its first emphasis in the months ahead on resolving the myriad economic difficulties besetting the Common Market.

Both leaders reaffirmed their commitments to such long-range goals of the nine-nation community as to achieving political unity by 1980.

But, they also made clear that the successful pursuit of such ends requires resolution of the more immediate problems that have plunged the community into disarray during recent months. These include the financial crisis in Italy, the demand by Britain for renegotiation of its terms of entry into the community, the uncertainties of the energy squeeze and the mounting inflation throughout Western Europe.

Schmidt and D'Estaing held their two days of talks here as part of the twice-yearly consultations called for under the 1955 French-German treaty of reconciliation. It was their second exchange of visits since they assumed the leadership of their respective governments in May.

The two have been close personal friends since their prior service as finance ministers in the Bonn and Paris regimes. Although they gave no really concrete indication of what joint initiatives they may be planning to take in European affairs, the visit was marked by an unmistakable aura of cordiality and lack of tension.

This was in marked contrast to some of the visits exchanged by their two predecessors: former German chancellor Willy Brandt and the late French president Georges Pompidou. Despite an outward patina of friendliness, Brandt and Pompidou, especially during the past two years, had been unable to conceal frequent sharp differences between their governments.

Among those Schmidt-D'Estaing decisions made public Tuesday was a determination to co-ordinate more closely the anti-inflation measures of their two governments. They also expressed hope that the recently launched dialogue between the community and the Arab world — a move designed to safeguard Western Europe's oil supplies — will soon move into "a concrete phase" leading to practical results.

The two also agreed that the 35-nation European security conference, now under way in Geneva, could be capped later this year by a summit meeting of top leaders from the participating countries. However, they added that this would depend on the conference making "concrete progress."

Nixon To Meet Business

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon will meet a leading group of businessmen and economists Thursday to hear their views on what, if anything, the government can do that it is not doing to try to safeguard the economy.

Kenneth Rush, economic counsellor to the president, said in announcing the meeting Tuesday that the administration is not resorting to "jaw-boning" but is trying to establish a dialogue on the dangers of inflation and the policies to check it.

He did not offer any new cures or claim that the administration had any new proposals to offer. Rather, he said that inflation "is not something that's going to disappear overnight, because the causes are fundamental."

"I wish this were a brief disease that we could take some medicine to cure," Rush said following a lengthy meeting the president held with his principal economic advisers.

Rush said the administration would continue to support tight monetary and fiscal policies and do what it can to stimulate productivity and new investment.

"We are very strongly committed to a tight monetary policy, a tight fiscal policy, no controls over wages and prices, no tax increase and certainly no tax decrease," Rush said in summing up administration policy.

Rush said that the administration would not carry its austerity policies so far as to cause recession. He also said he would not attempt to tell anyone what wages or prices would be acceptable although he will urge restraint in wage and price policies.

"We don't want 'jawboning' and then guidelines and then controls," he said.

Shortly before Rush spoke, Senate Majority leader Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.) said on Capitol Hill the president should summon a White House conference on the economy because "neither Congress nor the administration is doing a damn thing."

When asked about Mansfield's comment, Rush said the proposal for a White House conference "has a lot of merit" and he would be happy to discuss it with the senator. But he said he disagreed with Mansfield's criticism of administration policies.

"I think the administration is doing the right thing about inflation," Rush said.

The business and economic leaders invited to the White House represent a variety of opinion, but there are no labor leaders among them.

The 19 business leaders are heads of some of the largest corporations, including General Electric, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, Eastman Kodak and International Harvester.

The 12 economists include men as far apart as Charles Schultze and Otto Eckstein, Johnson administration officials, and Milton Friedman of the University of Chicago and Paul McCracken, the first chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers in the Nixon administration.

Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon, who was with the group that met with the president, said in a speech read for him before the U.S. Chamber of Commerce that "we have increased government spending faster than we have been willing to pay for it through taxation."

Despite an outward patina of friendliness, Brandt and Pompidou, especially during the past two years, had been unable to conceal frequent sharp differences between their governments.

Among those Schmidt-D'Estaing decisions made public Tuesday was a determination to co-ordinate more closely the anti-inflation measures of their two governments. They also expressed hope that the recently launched dialogue between the community and the Arab world — a move designed to safeguard Western Europe's oil supplies — will soon move into "a concrete phase" leading to practical results.

The two also agreed that the 35-nation European security conference, now under way in Geneva, could be capped later this year by a summit meeting of top leaders from the participating countries. However, they added that this would depend on the conference making "concrete progress."

Nixon To Meet Business

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon will meet a leading group of businessmen and economists Thursday to hear their views on what, if anything, the government can do that it is not doing to try to safeguard the economy.

Kenneth Rush, economic counsellor to the president, said in announcing the meeting Tuesday that the administration is not resorting to "jaw-boning" but is trying to establish a dialogue on the dangers of inflation and the policies to check it.

He did not offer any new cures or claim that the administration had any new proposals to offer. Rather, he said that inflation "is not something that's going to disappear overnight, because the causes are fundamental."

"I wish this were a brief disease that we could take some medicine to cure," Rush said following a lengthy meeting the president held with his principal economic advisers.

Rush said the administration would continue to support tight monetary and fiscal policies and do what it can to stimulate productivity and new investment.

"We are very strongly committed to a tight monetary policy, a tight fiscal policy, no controls over wages and prices, no tax increase and certainly no tax decrease," Rush said in summing up administration policy.

Rush said that the administration would not carry its austerity policies so far as to cause recession. He also said he would not attempt to tell anyone what wages or prices would be acceptable although he will urge restraint in wage and price policies.

"We don't want 'jawboning' and then guidelines and then controls," he said.

Shortly before Rush spoke, Senate Majority leader Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.) said on Capitol Hill the president should summon a White House conference on the economy because — "neither Congress nor the administration is doing a damn thing."

When asked about Mansfield's comment, Rush said the proposal for a White House conference "has a lot of merit" and he would be happy to discuss it with the senator. But he said he disagreed with Mansfield's criticism of administration policies.

"I think the administration is doing the right thing about inflation," Rush said.

The business and economic leaders invited to the White House represent a variety of opinion, but there are no labor leaders among them.

The 19 business leaders are heads of some of the largest corporations, including General Electric, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, Eastman Kodak and International Harvester.

The 12 economists include men as far apart as Charles Schultze and Otto Eckstein, Johnson administration officials, and Milton Friedman of the University of Chicago and Paul McCracken, the first chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers in the Nixon administration.

Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon, who was with the group that met with the president, said in a speech read for him before the U.S. Chamber of Commerce that "we have increased government spending faster than we have been willing to pay for it through taxation."

Beef Imports Banned by EEC

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The European Common Market banned beef imports for three days Tuesday and announced a "buy-Europe" plan to try to bring down beef surpluses and bring up prices.

The measures were announced Monday by Common Market agricultural commissioner Pierre Lardinois and went into effect Tuesday. Lardinois also said he would ask farm ministers of the nine common market nations, who will meet here Monday, to take other steps ranging from distribution of cheap beef for poor persons to the withholding of 400,000 young cows and bulls from market until next year.

The action Tuesday suspended import certificates for beef from all outside nations until July 12. A similar suspension affecting imports from European nations outside the Common Market had been instituted June 27.

From July 13, European beef importers must use the "pairing" system. This means they must buy from the Common Market beef stockpile an amount of meat equal to any beef they import from outside the Common Market.

Common Market beef stockpiles are estimated at 130,000 tons and have been driving wholesale prices down. Livestock farmers, particularly in France, have been urging action to keep prices up.

Lardinois, speaking to the European parliament in Strasbourg, France, said he would ask the ministers to agree to a plan for distributing large quantities of beef to poor persons, schools, hospitals, homes for the aged and other charitable institutions, at prices 50 per cent below current market levels.

Lardinois predicted that the Common Market will have to spend $480 million to support beef prices this year — 10 times the $48 million it had expected to spend.

He said he would urge the ministers to spend another $6 million for a publicity campaign in the nine Common Market nations, to increase demand for beef.

Skin Peeling Firm Agrees To Add Pain Warning to Ad

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — A wrinkle-remover company has agreed to stop advertising that its treatments are safe and effective, and will now warn customers they may be risking pain and infection, the U.S. federal trade commission announced today.

The company, Forever Young Inc., of Denver, Colo., has been using carbolic acid to remove the outer skin layer of persons who go to it for treatment, giving a temporary change in appearance, the FTC said.

But the acid can be poisonous and one patient allegedly died as a result of the treatment, the agency said. The ads, however, make no mention of pain, danger or discomfort, it said.

Under a consent order tentatively accepted by the commission the company will have to devote 15 per cent of its sales presentations and advertising to disclosing the hazards involved, or run a written notice in its ads which would read:

"Warning: This is a medical procedure — basically a chemical burn which peels skin away. It is extremely painful, takes a long time to heal, and exposes a person to risks of poisoning, infection, permanent scarring and other medical complications.

"If performed on the neck, the process may make it look worse. Many signs of aging are not improved by this process, and the benefit, if any, is mainly temporary. Only certain kinds of people can benefit from this process, and they should be diagnosed, selected, treated and continually cared for by a qualified doctor. Closely controlled medical conditions are not presently provided on the premises."

Two years ago public health authorities in Greater Victoria blocked a woman who wanted to open a skin peel clinic locally.

Dr. J. L. M[illegible]read, senior public health officer at the time, said the treatment was "quite dangerous" and the woman was attempting to practise medicine without a licence.

She planned on charging $500 for the treatment which involved burning away the top two layers of skin by rolling on a secret formula.

A dance will be held in the Sooke Community Hall from 9 p.m. to 1:30 a.m.

Astronomy Lectures July 31

The Victoria Centre of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada will again present a public lecture series on astronomy this summer.

The weekly lectures will be held Wednesdays at 8:30 p.m., starting July 31, in Room 168 of UVic's Elliott Building. There will be a $2 charge for the series.

Final lecture Aug. 28 will be a guided tour of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory in Saanich.

Astronomers from the observatory and the university, and visiting astronomer Dr. Charles Cowley of the University of Michigan, will give talks on: The Sky at Night, Exploration of the Planetary System, Stellar Chemistry and Galaxies and the Universe.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

As it was Richard Frank Ogden, 735 Goldstream, will spend the next 30 days in jail after appearing for sentencing before Judge Edmond St. Jorre in provincial court on a marijuana charge.

Ogden had been found guilty July 3 of possession of hashish, a charge laid last Oct. 13 when drug officers stopped a car and found a small set of scales under the front seat. An analysis showed traces of the illicit drug on the scales.

Prosecutor Mike Hutchison alluded then to a prior record but defence lawyer David Wilson refused to admit it.

Hutchison alleged Ogden had been convicted Jan. 11, 1974, in Victoria on a charge of possession of hashish, and had been convicted in Campbell River in 1971 of trafficking in LSD and an unspecified narcotic. He listed three other non-related convictions dating back to 1966.

On Tuesday he appeared with a transcript of the Jan. 11 hearing before Judge William Ostler wherein Ogden had pleaded guilty. The transcript set out Ogden's record.

Hutchison tendered it as evidence and also had court officer Sgt. John Burdyny, who attended the January hearing, identify the accused.

However, Wilson objected. He pointed out that in the transcript Ostler had asked the accused, after the record had been read, "Do you wish to say anything?" and Ogden had replied, "No, not really."

Wilson argued that just because Ogden said nothing it could not be inferred he admitted the record.

St. Jorre, while taking notice of the January conviction, agreed.

"It would be unfair to the accused to do otherwise," he said.

"If I had been able to accept all of the record I would have sentenced him to six months," the judge said.

It's a serious charge, a potentially dangerous act, and a wasteful use of a public service, Ostler said in fining Wayne Sealy $250 for setting off a false fire alarm.

Sealy of 135 Kingston pleaded guilty to pulling the alarm at the Imperial Inn early June 26 as he was leaving the beer parlor.

Prosecutor Gordon Macdonald noted the fire department was fighting another fire in James Bay at the time.

Sealy explained he had been drinking heavily and never knew he had pulled the alarm until management told him.

Stealing a $6.87 eight-track tape from Woolco, resulted in a $200 fine for Michael Duane Bowie, 18, of 3356 Ocean Blvd who pleaded guilty.

Seventeen-year-old Lorna Doll Mack, 3980 Bear, received a suspended sentence and six months probation for shoplifting a $14.88 coat from K-Mart, 3986 Shelbourne, on Saturday. She pleaded guilty.

Robert John Layman, 17, of No. 2, 950 Humboldt, was fined $250 after pleading guilty to possessing a small amount of marijuana when stopped and checked by drug officers in the 1200-block Wharf Monday.

Normally the charge draws a $75 fine, but in this case Ostler took into consideration a similar conviction in Edmonton last September.

Smugglers Make Hash Of Insides

WINCHESTER, England (Reuter) — Two men, who each swallowed 24 rubber condoms containing liquid hashish, were convicted of attempted smuggling.

They were close to death when they arrived at Heathrow Airport after a vacation in Tangier, Morocco, the court was told.

A customs officer said it was only the second known attempt in the world to smuggle liquid hashish, a highly-concentrated form of the drug, by swallowing it.

John Pounder and Paul Smith, both aged 24, were given suspended sentences of two years in pirson and fines of $480.

Arts Favored for Building

The second floor of the Royal Oak Private Hospital has been recommended for use as art studios and a gallery.

Saanich's indoor and recreation committee decided Tuesday to recommend to council that the Co-operative Art Grouup, headed by Windsor Utley of Ganges, be allowed to rent the floor at $125 a month for a trial period of one year.

The main floor of the municipally-owned building is now used by Arbutus Crafts. The art group will pay Arbutus Crafts $25 a month to cover the costs of heat, light and other utilities.

The Boys' Club of Greater Victoria had also approached Saanich, asking it be given the use of the second floor for a Saanich branch of its Alternative Program, which counsels and provides instruction for school dropouts.

Tuesday night Ald. Mel Couvelier failed in an attempt to have the matter tabled.

He contended Royal Oak residents had complained of no community facilities, adding that if the boys' club was permitted to use the premises, the hospital might eventually be a youth drop-in centre when Arbutus Crafts vacated the main floor.

Arbutus Crafts plans to move to the activity centre for the handicapped when it is built at the Battin-Fielding complex on Taylor.

Couvelier contended that 40 per cent of the boys now handled by the boys' club were from Saanich.

Ald. Les Passmore suggested, however, the boys' club would be better located in a recreation area, such as the Cedar Hill Community Centre or Lambrick Park.

Recreation manager Bill Young said he had been instructed to negotiate terms with the Co-operative Art Group before the boys' club application had been received.

"It would be a moral breach of promise," Ald. Joe Bourque said, if the art group deal was not ratified. "I am fully satisfied that there are other facilities (for the boys' club) if we make an attempt to find them".

Mayor Ed Lum agreed, saying there were probably school facilities or church halls in the municipality that could be used.

Only Ald. Fred Severson opposed the motion to rent the hospital premises to the art group. He wondered how long the premises would be large enough for the art group's operation.

Canadian Prisoners 'Tortured' in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Canadians and Americans arrested at the Mexico City airport while smuggling drugs to the United States from South America are beaten, tortured with electric cattle prods and tricked into confessions, says a spokesman for those arrested.

Sixty-eight of the prisoners started a hunger strike Tuesday at Lecumberri prison to protest their alleged treatment.

Six of the prisoners told reporters that after the beatings and torture, the authorities tell the foreigners they will be deported within 24 hours if they sign a document. But the document is in Spanish, and "it's only after you sign that you find out it is a confession in which you admit to more than you've done, which was just transporting drugs," said Philip Millard, 29, of Alameda, Calif.

The prisoners said the Canadian and American governments generally neglect their claims.

Officials of the Mexican attorney-general's office were not available for comment.

The prisoners' spokesmen said all but four of the 72 Americans and Canadians in Lecumberri joined the hunger strike. The spokesman said Americans and Canadians at the Santa Marta women's prison on the other side of the city also started a hunger strike, but the Mexican authorities would not confirm this and reporters could not get into that prison.

Mexican lawyers also extort money from families of the prisoners, the prisoners' spokesmen said.

Most of the Americans and Canadians in Lecumberri and Santa Marta were recruited in Colombia, Peru and other South American countries to take drugs with them to the United States, said the prisoners.

Lisbon Crisis

LISBON (AP) — President Antonio de Spinola sought to patch together a new coalition government today amid reports he has asked Premier Adelino da Palma Carlos to withdraw his resignation.

Palma Carlos and four other ministers resigned Tuesday, taking the centre out of the centre-left government and bringing on the worst political crisis since Spinola came to power 10 weeks ago.

Gen. Francisco da Costa Gomes, chief of staff and a member of the Spinola-led military junta, confirmed reports of the possible return of Palma Carlos.

Political sources said Spinola has given Palma Carlos 24 hours to reconsider. Palma Carlos quit after the state council, the president's advisory body, refused to widen his authority sufficiently, he said.

He was followed out of office by Vice-Premier Francisco sa Carneiro, Economics Minister Vasco Vieira de Almeida, the defence minister, Lt.-Col. Mario Firmino Miguel, and Interior Minister Joaquim Jorge Magalhaes Mota. All are considered moderates.

Little Leaguers Offered Space

Little League Baseball Canada will be offered space on which to build a national headquarters in Saanich's Lambrick Park.

The parks and indoor recreation committee will recommend space be provided, but said Tuesday there was not room in the Barn at the park that could be used.

It was suggested space could be found at the northeast end of the park, providing Little League Baseball Canada financed the building, which would become Saanich property.

In other business, the committee agreed to recommend $2,250 be added to the parks budget to provide six weeks of supervision at four parks — Royal Oak, Allenby, Qu'Appelle and Fairburn.

Ald. Fred Severson said he had been disturbed at publicity given Royal Oak park, where, parents had complained, children had no summer program because there was no supervisor.

"The budget was slashed. It was a matter of priority. They felt other parks were being used more," Severson said, "When they cut the budget the parks administrator had no other alternative."

Severson said he hoped some of the additional money needed might be covered if the provincial government provides a one-third grant toward $20,000 needed for two tennis courts at Prospect Lake and $9,000 for an all-weather soccer pitch at Hampton Park.

The committee was told by controller-treasurer R. F. Broughton Tuesday that the provincial department of recreation and conservation had informed him the grant might be available from the Community Recreational Facilities Fund.

The committee will recommend council apply for the grant.

Saanich Supports Royal Roads Park

Saanich's parks and indoor recreation committee will recommend to council that it support the creation of a botanical park at Royal Roads Military College.

The committee decided Tuesday that Saanich should support a bid by the Greater Victoria Environmental Centre that the park be established at Royal Roads.

The committee was told by John Priestman, chairman of the project committee, that Royal Roads commandant Capt. Robert Peers considers the park would not be "incompatible with its collegiate role".

Mayor Ed Lum said the Royal Roads park should be referred to the parks committee of the Capital Regional District for consideration.

He said Saanich had planned in 1967 to have a terraced botanical park in the Swan Lake area, with local nurserymen donating the shrubs and trees.

The project had fallen through, he said, because Saanich had had no money to finance its share.

The committee decided to recommend that council endorse consideration of both parks by the CRD.

Farm Laborers Get $1 Pay Hike

Wages for semi-skilled farm laborers have been increased from $3 to $4 an hour, the B.C. Federation of Agriculture announced Tuesday.

The pay hike is the result of an agreement reached between Agriculture Minister David Stupich and the federation.

OFC takes no getting used to.

You'll find the taste of OFC 8-Year Old is one you don't have to 'acquire'.

Your first sip will be smooth, easy and gentle yet full-bodied.

Why?

Because OFC is 'picked in its prime'. Not at 2 years old when Canadian ryes tend to be pale, harsh and unmatured. And not at 12 when they can become darker and take on a 'woody' taste.

But in "The Prime of Life" — at 8 years old and only 8 years old — when, in our opinion, Canadian whisky reaches that exact moment in time when it is perfection.

If that's what you are after, try OFC 8-Year Old.

It's the one Canadian so smooth, so consistent that it takes no getting used to.

He's Diked Flats To Grow Food

Roosen and his family are constructing a chain of dikes to close off the daily tides which flood most of the 22.5-acre property situated on the Sechelt Peninsula. He expects to have the dikes, patterned after those used to reclaim tidal land in Holland, completed by September.

The main dike section, which the family is building with a tractor and a power shovel, will be five feet high and a half-mile long.

Behind the dikes, he plans to establish his vegetable farm, including gardens, a greenhouse for tomatoes, a barn and horse pasture. The famr has been the dream of Roosen, 40, since he and his wife, Joanne, left Holland for Canada 18 years ago.

"In Holland I farmed vegetables and came to Canada to do the same thing, but I never got the chance," said Roosen. "I ended up in fuel oil business in North Vancouver.

"We often looked at this land when we came up here on vacation thinking that in Holland they would know how to use it. Llast summer I decided it was time, so I bought it."

Because the Roosens' property is on the upper end of the Oyster Bay flats, the familiar windmill pumps won't be necessary to drain off the water which seeps through the dikes into the ditch behind.

"When the tide goes out, we'll just open the sluice gates in the dikes and the water will all drain off."

Roosen said soil tests show heavy fertilization will be unnecessary because the land is sufficiently free of salt deposits.

He said the farm is not as ambitious as might have been tried in Holland.

"If this had been Holland they would have diked it all off," he said pointing to the outer marsh where the tidal flats meet Pender harbor, after which the landing is named. "Then they would have pumped all the water out."

Roosen has purchased an 11,000-square-foot greenhouse from Holland and plans to grow tomatoes in it.

"I expect 10 tons of tomatoes this fall, more next year when I put central heating into the greenhouse."

ALBERTA RULES PENTHOUSE OBSCENE

EDMONTON (CP) — The province's highest court was sharply divided as a two-to-one majority ruled a 17-month-old magazine obscene.

The decision, handed down this week by the appellate division of the Supreme Court of Alberta, concerned the February, 1973, issue of Penthouse Magazine.

The three-man bench heard 1½ days of argument on the case at the beginning of June and then reserved its decision.

This week, Mr. Justice G. H. Allen, with whom Alberta's chief justice S. Bruce Smith agreed, declared that the magazine "offers a lurid example of undue exploitation of sex . . ."

On the other hand, Mr. Justice William Sinclair, in a dissenting judgment, wrote the "girlie magazine" did not fit into the obscenity category.

The dissenting opinion of Mr. Justice Sinclair gives the magazine company and Provincial News Co., the distributor, an automatic right to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

L. Harris McDonald, one of the lawyers involved in the case, said he didn't know whether an appeal would be undertaken.

RUBBER ROUNDS CAPE SCOTT

NANAIMO (CP) — The bathtub Bismark Two and its lone occupant, Fred Maguire of Nanaimo, rounded the northern tip of Vancouver Island Tuesday and were southbound along the rugged and lonely west coast of the island.

The Bismark Two rounded Cape Scott and was reported about 20 miles north of Winter Harbor, Maguire's next st[illegible]

Maguire, who left Nanaimo last Thursday on his attempt to circumnavigate Vancouver Island, reported the nicest day of the trip so far although some waves in the area were up to 20 feet high.

He also reported sighting 15 sea lions near Cape Scott and said a killer whale surfaced near the Bismark Two but then moved off without incident.

Abbotsford Lumberyard Goes Up in Flames

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — Fire destroyed a downtown lumberyard and chemical storage building Tuesday at this municipality, 40 miles east of Vancouver.

The fire broke out about 10 p.m. and was still burning at midnight, although under control. Firemen, with no hope of saving the yard or the building, were letting the fire burn itself out.

Nobody was injured.

Four Young Fliers Missing

PENTICTON (CP) — Search was to resume today for four young persons from Prince George missing since Sunday aboard a twin-engined plane.

A spokesman for search and rescue said the search would continue for the four after bad flying weather hampered the search Tuesday.

A helicopter, a Canadian Forces Buffalo aircraft and two civilian planes took part in the search Tuesday of the area between Grand Forks and Osoyoos in south central British Columbia.

Pilot of the plane was Victor Engstrom, 18, who had about 200 hours flying time. Also aboard were his unidentified 19-year-old sister and 14-year-old brother and a friend, Allan Warren, 20.

Search officials said there was no automatic crash locator aboard the plane.

Builder Labelled Negligent

REVELSTOKE (CP) — A coroner's jury has found negligence on the part of Mannix Construction Co. Ltd. of Calgary in the deaths of four men at the Mica Creek hydro project in eastern British Columbia.

The jury found negligence on the part of the company in allowing the men to work without the supervision of qualified engineers. The inquest ended Tuesday.

The four men were killed May 22 when they fell about 140 feet after an elevator shaft platform on which they were standing collapsed in a giant underground powerhouse being built by B.C. Hydro.

The jury recommended that all platforms or staging upon which the men will be working should be properly designed and engineered by qualified engineers and should not be altered without authority of engineers.

Stock Dealers Face Trial

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice F. C. Munroe Tuesday upheld a provincial court ruling which requires Robert Arthur Bennett and Henry Schuette to stand trial on Crown allegations that they sought in 1971 to create a misleading appearance of active public trading in the common stock of Alberta Gypsum Ltd.

They are alleged to have placed stock orders through the Calgary Stock Exchange.

In a supreme court application to quash the committal for trial, it was claimed that the provincial judge had no jurisdiction to make the order because the charges involved a stock market outside of British Columbia.

Mr. Justice Munroe held that the provincial court judge in the circumstances did have the authority.

Ministers Meet Here Thursday

B.C. is hosting the three-day meeting and a statement from the office of Human Resources Minister Norm Levi said the conference "is expected to define positions common to the west and communicate them to the federal government."

Let's Have a Clambake!

Victoria Times
THIRD SECTION
family

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

Blessed are those who live by the sea for theirs is the kingdom of shellfish and seaweed, the two principal ingredients of an old-fashioned clambake. Clambakes come in two sizes: the large traditional back-breaking affair with pits to dig and rocks to fire and sand to sweep, and the more recently evolved wash-boiler clambake for smaller gatherings. The latter, of course, may lack the color of the original, but we can state emphatically that the results are more or less equal. And there is one vast and important difference. The marvelous, old-fasioned clambake demands 600 pounds of seaweed. With the wash-boiler type you can settle for a child's portion — 24 pounds.

For testing the doneness of a wash-boiler clambake, put a raw potato in the centre of the top layer of seaweed. When the potato is tender without being mushy, it is time to feast. The clambake described here is adapted to the Pacific coast — except you'll have to buy the lobster. East coast lobster runs at about $6 per pound for tails, all that's available in Victoria.

WASH-BOILER CLAMBAKE

2 three-and-one-half to four-pound chickens, quartered; Peanut, vegetable or corn oil;
2 teaspoons paprika;
Salt and freshly ground pepper;
24 or more littleneck clams;
17 potatoes, preferably red-skinned, "new" potatoes, about two and one-half pounds;
3 or 4 horse or butter clams (for flavor only); 1 dozen lobster tails — more if very small;
16 ears fresh corn, unshucked;
½ pound butter, melted;
Lemons, cut into wedges; optional.
Tabasco sauce, optional.
Worcestershire sauce, optional.

1. Gather the seaweed and have it ready.

2. Make a large wood fire in a grill, improvised if need be, on which the wash boiler will sit.

3. Make a charcoal fire for grilling the chicken pieces.

4. Select a wash boiler or other kettle with an 18-gallon capacity.

5. Place the chicken in a large dish and add enough oil to coat the pieces. Sprinkle with paprika, salt and pepper to taste and rub well.

6. Grill the chicken pieces quickly first on one side, then the other until they are golden brown but not cooked. Tie two pieces of chicken in each of four cheesecloth bags.

7. Make individual cheesecloth packages of the littleneck clams, about three or more per serving.

8. Add about a sixth of the seaweed to the bottom of the wash boiler. Add the chicken in cheesecloth.

9. Cover with the same amount of seaweed and add all but one of the potatoes.

10. Add more seaweed and the packaged clams. Add the horse or butter clams.

11. Add more seaweed and the lobster tails.

12. Add more seaweed and the corn. Add a final layer of seaweed and place the reserved potato directly in the centre. Cover closely with a lid. Weight the lid down with heavy stones. Cook over a good fire for about one and one-quarter to one and one-half hours or until the potato on top is tender without being mushy.

13. Serve all the foods simultaneously with melted butter, lemon wedges and the optional sauces. Cold beer, but of course. Plus ice cream or watermelon.

YIELD: Eight servings.

New York Times

HAPPY LOBSTERMAN Clarence Gauthier of North Rustico, P.E.I. hold up hands filled with Lobster after returning with a day's catch on province's north shore. Lobster fishermen in the area are at the end of their 60-day season. They get paid $1 per pound for lobster which, when you go to buy it in Victoria for your Claiborne clambake, will run you about $6 per pound.

Cunning Herb Usage Reduces Sugar Need

By HILDA BEASTALL

The continual rise in cost of sugar need be of little concern to readers of this column, for you will find very small amounts in the recipes.

As local fresh and garden fruits come into season, here is an effective method of still further reducing the need for additional sugar.

The suggestion is to use the garden herbs angelica (Angelica archangelica) and sweet cicely (Myrrhis odorata) as a pleasant and effective way to reduce the acidity of rhubarb, black and red currants, raspberries, blackberries, unripe gooseberries and indeed all fruits which, when cooked, require sweetening. Most of these fruits are naturally sweet to eat raw, only losing their sugars when subjected to cooking. Using these herbs, the amount of commercial sugar is reduced unbelievably.

The addition of three or four leaves of lemon balm (Melissa officinalis) with the above herbs, intensifies the effect in the same way as when we add fresh lemon when cooking these fruits.

This spring I was able to experiment with both angelica and sweet cicely, for my plants now have plenty of leaves. A carton of frozen unsugared blackberries gave the chance to make a large pie, sprinkling the fruit with one tablespoon of chopped young angelica leaf and one tablespoon of demerara sugar.

The effect surprised me although I had heard that angelica halved the amount of sugar needed to sweeten really sour fruits.

The pleasant part of the experiment was that the pie was not sweet, but the blackberry flavor was still there with tartness smoothed out.

Fresh Fruit Cobbles is a deep dish pie made with any kind of fresh fruit as it becomes available. The top crust is quickly mixed and dropped on top of the fruit by spoonfuls. There is no undercrust to get soggy. This kind of pie is good food to follow generus summer salads.

If you use rhubarb, stew it first, using a quarter cup of demerara sugar to four cups of two-inch pieces of rhubarb. Add one tablespoon of chopped angelica leaf and stem, or of sweet cicely.

Use three leaves of lemon balm with the sweet cicely, or a teaspoon of lemon juice and a little grated peel. Cook rhubarb only until it loses its firmness.

FRESH FRUIT COBBLER A DEEP PIE

4 cups cooked, sweetened rhubarb prepared as above OR 4 cups raw other fruits with
1 Tbsp. demerara sugar and
1 Tbsp. chopped angelica leaves.
1 Tbsp. soft margarine.
1 Tbsp. wholewheat flour.
Top Crust:
1 ¾ cups unbleached flour.
¼ cup wheat germ.
1 tsp. brewers yeast powder.
2 tsp. baking powder.
½ tsp. salt.
1 tsp. demerara sugar.
4 ½ Tbsp. soft margarine or soy oil.
¾ cup skim milk with powdered skim.

Dot the margarine (first amount) over the fruit to prevent juice boiling over) and sprinkle with flour to thicken slightly.

Measure all dry ingredients for top crust into mixing bowl, and mix well with spoon or fork. Add margarine or oil, mixing again with fork.

Stir in the milk gradually, using just enough to make a rather soft dough, but one that still holds its shape.

Drop by spoonfuls over the fruit.

Bake at 375 degs. for about 30 minutes. Cover with foil for last few minutes if necessary to prevent scorching the crust.

If fruits other than rhubarb are used, place them in the deep dish, about four cups, sprinkle with the sugar and angelica leaves before dotting with margarine and flour.

The Cobbler is served hot or warm, with yogurt or sour cream.

Casserole Clinches Buffet

This time of the year brings many special occasions — graduations, showers, receptions and family reunions — when you want to entertain a larger group of people than you can seat comfortably in your dining area. One simple solution is to serve a meal buffet-style where your guests serve themselves from a table on which an array of food is placed. Good food, an attractive table and congenial company can combine to give a buffet which has all the graciousness of a meal that you would serve formally. Although buffet meals are easy on you as a hostess, they do require careful planning and preparation.

When planning the menu, consider casserole dishes — they come piping hot from the oven to the table and they hold the heat well. A choice of hot and cold dishes is a good idea. Remember that the food need not be elaborate, but it should be plentiful and easy to eat with only a fork or a spoon. Considering the menu from another standpoint, include dishes which can be prepared in advance so that you will have little to do immediately before dinner is served except arrange the food on the table.

Your buffet table should be as attractive as possible. Arrange the food, plates, napkins and silver in the order in which they will be used, making it easy for your guests to serve themselves. If there is not sufficient space on the table for the dessert, or if you are serving a frozen dessert it can be brought to the table after the first course.

The home economists at Agriculture Canada offer several recipe suggestions for your next special occasion. All may be prepared well in advance. The rich, creamy "Chicken and Ham Casserole" is a magnificent dish which may be reheated while you welcome your guests. "Cucumber Mousse" need only be unmolded at serving time. Its refreshing flavor and delicate color will add a touch of elegance to your table. As a grande finale, serve a mouth-watering "Strawberry Ice Cream Torte." To complete your menu include a crisp salad, a platter of assorted cold cuts, relishes, a large basket of rolls and biscuits and trays of fruit and cheese.

CHICKEN AND HAM CASSEROLE

½ pound halved mushrooms
¼ cup diced green pepper
¼ cup butter
¼ cup flour
1½ cups milk
¼ cup chicken bouillon
¼ teaspoon garlic salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon monosodium glutamate
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon tomato catsup
1½ cup cubed Canadian Tilsit cheese.
1½ cups diced cooked chicken
1½ cups diced cooked ham
2 cups cooked thin noodles (4 ounces uncooked)
¼ cup sherry
1 cup buttered bread cubes

Saute mushrooms and green pepper in butter about 5 minutes. Blend in flour, seasonings and catsup. Gradually add milk and bouillon. Stir and cook until smooth and thick. Add cheese and stir until melted. Add chicken, ham, noodles and sherry. Pour into greased baking dish and top with bread cubes. Bake 30 minutes at 350 degrees F. 6 servings.

CUCUMBER MOUSSE

1 envelope gelatin
¼ cup water
3 tablespoons vinegar
¾ teaspoon salt
Dash white pepper
Dash cayenne
½ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
2 cups finely chopped, unpeeled cucumbers
2 teaspoons finely chopped onion
¾ cup whipping cream, whipped

Soak gelatin in cold water and vinegar. Add salt, pepper, cayenne and heat to dissolve. Chill until partially set. Add mayonnaise, cucumber and onion. Fold mixture into whipped cream. Pour into greased mold. Serve on salad greens. 6 servings.

STRAWBERRY TORTE

1 10-inch angel cake
1 quart strawberry ice cream
1 15-ounce package frozen sweetened sliced strawberries
1 egg white
½ cup sugar

Slice cake into 3 layers. Soften ice cream and thaw berries, reserving ½ cup. Fold berries into ice cream. Spread ice cream mixture between layers of cake. Beat egg white until soft peaks form, gradually beat in sugar and reserved ½ cup berries and continue beating until stiff and glossy. Add few drops red food coloring if desired. Spread on top and sides of cake. Freeze. Remove from freezer 10 minutes before serving. 10 to 12 servings.

Main Course Soup Back on the Stove

By MARY MOORE

"Why don't you repeat all of those soups that were so popular with your readers a year or so ago? I don't want to tell you how to run your business but I know people in our neighborhood who swear by your recipes and need the economical ones. Is that a good idea?" — Irene M.

Good for your Irene. We were pleased because we have run out of copies of the main course Beef and Vegetable Soup and would like to make a rerun.

BEEF-VEGETABLE SOUP

9 cups water
3 cups (1¼ lbs.) diced stewing beef
1 tbsp beef cordial
1 tbsp. salt
¼ tsp. black pepper
¼ cup rice
1 cup broken up noodles
1 cup diced (¼") carrots
1 medium onion, chopped
1 medium parsnip diced (¼")
1½ cup chopped celery (about 3 outside stalks)
1 cup shredded cabbage

Into the soup pot measure the water and meat and turn on heat and add all remaining ingredients as you get them ready. Bring to boil, reduce heat, cover and simmer four hours.

This results in thick hearty soup that is nourishing and perfectly satisfactory for a main course — as the Europeans use thick soups.

Beard on Bread:

By WILLIAM RICE

At 71 James Beard is everything a monument should be: Dignified, quietly awe-inspiring and massive, yet sculpted with a generous touch of warmth and humanity.

Following the success of his significant book "American Cookery," published in 1972, Beard is touring the U.S. to promote "Beard On Bread" (Knopf, $7.95, the 16th volume he has composed during a career that has made him one of the continent's leading food authorities.

Like the other books, "Beard On Bread" is very good. It is good because the recipes work, because the commentary is enlightening but restrained, and because the genuineness of James Beard's life-long passion for food and cookery is reflected throughout the volume.

"I think one of the healthiest signs today is that many people are doing a little growing on their own, even if they have just a tiny bit of space. It may be just tomatoes and squash and a few herbs. But it's an expression of dissatisfaction with what they can buy and that's very cheering," he remarked.

Don't type Beard as a dogged back-to-nature advocate, however. Taking a late breakfast in a hotel coffee shop recently, he was still shaking his head at the discussion on a radio interview he had just finished.

"One of the people was preaching nothing but health foods," he said, "The other loves nothing and never eats a full meal. It was quite a show.

"I didn't preach about whole grain flours in the bread book," he continued. "I think people are kind of bored with preaching about food."

The kitchen, reasonably enough, was the scene of my first gastronomic adventure. I was on all fours. I crawled into the vegetable bin, settled on a giant green onion and ate it, skin and all.

—James A. Beard, "Delights and Prejudices"

—Ibid.

Beard was born into an atmosphere where raw materials — the best available — were continually turned into foods that by all accounts had remarkable character and taste. The chief inspiration was his mother, Elizabeth, who ran a hotel in Portland, Ore. Next came Let, a Chinese cook whose talents Beard's writings have made legend. But curiosity of a large boy into reference to good eating.

In "Delights And Prejudices," written nearly 10 years ago, Beard explained how he searched out the food markets in each new town and country he visited. "No market is too small to captivate me," he wrote. "In each I discover new foods, new challenges."

A while ago in Chicago, finding himself with an evening free, Beard wandered off in search of a nearly forgotten Italian restaurant, a hangout of mobsters in the 1920's, because "somebody told me they still cook well there." Then, fresh from a visit to Scotland and England, he was recalling the superb coloring and taste of a carrot soup and chuckling over a luncheon with the English food writer Elizabeth David that had gone on for eight hours.

"There was a lot of talk of course," he said, "And a lot of wine too." Away from home for 10 days with a full week of city-hopping ahead, Beard could still look forward to a visit to New Zealand.

"It may not be the cooking. I really don't expect too much, he said. "But I've always been curious about that country. So much raw material for cooking comes from there.

It may seem that James Beard lives and breathes, as well as eats, cooking. Not so. At an early age, he was captivated by music and theatre, once took vocal lessons and "aspired to the stage." He still attends opera and symphony performances regularly and has a remarkable store of musical comedy songs and lyrics in his head.

He collects kitchen knives and cuff-links and considers himself to be the possessor of one of the world's great collections of wine rinsers. These implements, made only during the 17th and 18th centuries in England, were placed before guests at a dinner party so they could rinse out their glasses as wines changed from course to course.

"Glasses had to be plain so one could appreciate the color of the wine inside," Beard explained, "so the host who would show off sent for elaborate wine rinsers instead. Some of them are decorated in gold or with crests and are truly beautiful."

The wine rinsers are in the same New York City townhouse where Beard lives and operates his prestigious cooking school. He teaches there, classes of no more than a dozen students, for three months a year and for another three of four weeks on the west coast. He spends another six to eight weeks on the road, making one- or two-day personal appearances and doing demonstrations. This past summer after a French holiday he went to Oregon to conduct weeklong classes at a beachside site.

The moments between these engagements go to testing and to writing a newspaper column and his books.

Beard has drawn some fire for endorsing products and for serving as a consultant to food companies and restaurants. His response to that is simple:

"I never have endorsed anything I didn't believe in," he said. "And I've turned down far more than I've accepted. I told the Aunt Jemima people I wouldn't look good in a bandanna."

Beard caused a stir writing in a recent issue of New York Magazine, when he endorsed electric stoves (over gas), Teflon skillets and microwave ovens while confessing he didn't use copper cookware much "because it requires such upkeep"), hated wooden salad bowls and electric knives ("I would no more think of using one on a fine roast or steak than I would a pruning saw.")

"I'm not against anything that's a labor saver, if it's honest," he declared. "It's silly to be against equipment just because it's new and efficient. If it does a job and does it well, it represents a great improvement."

Saving labor time is crucial, in Beard's opinion, if fine restaurants are to survive. "There aren't as many outstanding restaurants today," he said, looking back on half a century of eating here and abroad. "It's not that the cooks have lost their art. There's just not the help to do things properly. It's all dependent on labor.

"You can eat very well in a restaurant if the preparation is done properly. There's no real distinction between food served in a restaurant or in a private home. Each is an individual case and it's simply a matter of the skill in the hands that prepare it and the quality of the ingredients that are used."

He despairs over the loss of regional character in food and looks forward with as much apprehension as hope.

"There's been a deterioration in quality in many of the standard foods on our grocery shelves," he said, referring to recent tastings he had conducted. "I was quite shocked at the change in Worcestershire sauce and how highly seasoned Campbell's beef consomme is. People use it in place of stock although it would drown out most other flavors. In the next generation, God only knows. Maybe they'll settle for formula food."

Beard's own predilection is for buttermilk and walnut bread in his book and for the smell of other "good things baking." He also likes to taste them. His gourmandese is tempered by the memory of a heart attack he suffered two years ago and by his respect for a doctor who "fortunately is an intelligent man."

"To lose weight I go on an absolutely strict calorie count. It works very sanely and easily." He paused. "I should go on a diet after the rich food on this trip. It's going to be one of my next projects." But for the moment, it was more agreeable to talk of bread, wine and cheese.

Sour-Cream Bread was invented by chance

Sour-Cream Bread

"This is a very rich bread with a slightly acid flavor and a wonderful texture. I invented it one day when I set out to make buttermilk bread and didn't have any buttermilk. I resorted to sour cream instead, and the results were highly satisfactory. I like it as a fresh bread, with plenty of butter, or as toast, and I must say it also makes decicious sandwiches."

MAKES 2 LOAVES

- 1 package active dry yeast
- 3 tablespoons granulated sugar
- ¼ cup warm water (100 to 115 degrees approximately)
- 2 cups sour cream, at room temperature
- 1 tablespoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon baking soda
- 4½ to 5 cups all-purpose flour

Combine the yeast, sugar and water, allow to proof for 5 minutes. Put the sour cream, salt and soda in a mixing bowl. Add the yeast mixture. Then add 4 cups of the flour, cup by cup, to make a very wet, sticky dough, beating hard with a wooden spoon after each addition. Scrape out onto a lightly floured board. Using a baker's scraper or a spackling knife, lift the flour and dough, and fold the dough over. Turn it clockwise slightly and repeat the lifting and folding process until the dough is less sticky and can be worked with your hands. Add only enough flour to prevent sticking. (This entire kneading should take about 10 minutes, possibly longer if you are inexperienced.) Shape the dough into a ball, place in a buttered bowl, and turn to coat it with the butter. Cover with plastic and let sit in a warm spot to double in bulk.

Punch the dough down. Turn onto a lightly floured board and knead for a minute, then divide into two equal pieces. Butter two 9x5x3-inch loaf tins. Shape the dough into loaves and fit into the tins. Cover loosely and let rise again until doubled. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven for 30 to 35 minutes, or until the loaves sound hollow when tapped on top and bottom. Cool thoroughly before slicing.

Cream Biscuits

"We had a reputation at home for very special biscuits, which were made by our Chinese cook, who was with us for many years. After he left us they became a standard item in our household, and I still make them very often. The secret of their unique quality is this: They use heavy cream instead of butter or shortening."

ABOUT 12 BISCUITS

- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¾ to 1 cup heavy cream
- 1 tablespoon double-acting baking powder
- 2 teaspoons granulated sugar
- melted butter

Sift the dry ingredients together and fold in the heavy cream until it makes a soft dough that can be easily handled. Turn out on a floured board, knead for about 1 minute, and then pat to a thickness of about ½ to ¾ inch. Cut in rounds or squares, dip in melted butter, and arrange on a buttered baking sheet or in a square and arrange on a buttered pan. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven for 15 to 18 minutes and serve very hot.

SALMON ROUNDS COOL FOR SINGLES

"Iced" Salmon Rounds will be enjoyed by any "single" — whether male or female. Developed especially for the summer, this dish is perfect for the person who likes to dabble in creative cooking without having to stand for hours over a hot stove. And when family get back to town, this recipe shouldn't be forgotten. Any number of canned salmon rounds can be iced and served, for example, on the party buffet table.

ICED SALMON ROUNDS

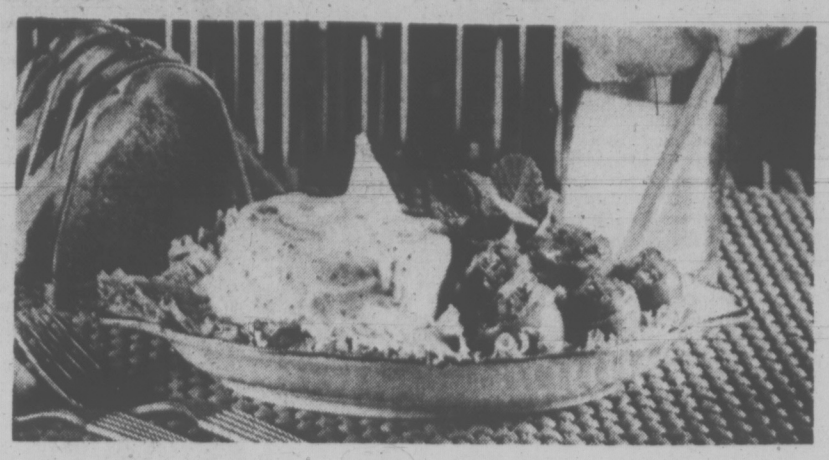
Lettuce
¼ cup mayonnaise
¼ teaspoon curry powder, or to taste
¼ teaspoon celery seed
½ teaspoon finely grated lemon rind
Cherry tomatoes
Green pickle relish
Hot buttered toast

Drain and reserve juices from salmon. Keeping the salmon whole as it comes from the can, place on bed of lettuce arranged on serving plate. Blend mayonnaise, reserved salmon juices, curry powder, celery seed, and lemon rind. Use this mixture to "ice" the top and sides of the salmon round. Place in refrigerator to chill. Hollow out cherry tomatoes, stuff with green pickle relish. Before serving, garnish top of salmon with twist of lemon. Serve accompanied by stuffed tomatoes and hot buttered toast spread with chili sauce or catsup and sprinkled with a dash of curry powder. Serves one.



One round per person in this chilly fish dish

Snacking Can Be Sensible

Snacks do not have to be foods such as party foods, candy and soft drinks which contribute only empty calories to our daily food requirement. These foods eaten between meals may make the difference between just enough calories in a day and too many.

On the other hand snack foods can be planned to contribute to our daily food requirement — this is the sensible approach to snacking.

Whether you're interested in shedding a few pounds or simply in good nutrition here are some ideas for sensible snacking from Agriculture Canada's Food Advisory Services.

—Avoid buying empty calorie snack food. You don't need them and they only add to the food bill.

—If you must have a piece of pie or cake between meals, save your dessert from meal time for a moment of weakness. One piece of chocolate layer cake has fewer calories than two!

—Milk and fruit juice are refreshing and nutritious beverages. Weight watchers — remember skim milk.

—Nuts, cheese, fresh fruits and raw vegetables such as celery and carrot sticks, green pepper strips and cauliflower are convenient, delicious and fun to eat.

—Habitual breakfast skippers should plan a morning snack so as not to be tempted by a gooey doughnut or even worse — a candy bar. Yogurt, cheese and crackers, bran muffins or a peanut butter sandwich will fill the gap until lunch.

—Peanut butter cookies, oatmeal cookies with raisins or nuts or whole wheat or graham crackers are ideal snacks for the kids.

All or Nothing

DEAR ABBY: Listen to this: We are 2½ girls living together. (The "½" girl lives here half the time, and with her fiance the other half.)

The ½ girl friend is getting married next month, so the other roommate and I offered to give her a shower.

We asked "Miss ½" to give us the usual type list for both wedding and shower gifts. (We wanted to know what colors, and pattern of china, silver and glassware she selected, in case someone wanted to add to it.)

Her list floored us. It went something like this: "Enamel pots and pans only. No Teflon — I hate them! A battery-run kitchen clock. I won't accept one that's electric. No tea towels. I hate them. I don't want any cheap glasses, only crystal. Money is always best."

My roommate and I were embarrassed to read such a list. When I asked "Miss ½" to be a little more specific, she said she didn't have time to go into it, but if people didn't want to give her what she wanted, she didn't want anything.

What should we do! She's 30 years old and has never been married. — Two Confused Roommates.

DEAR CONFUSED: "Miss ½" gave you an out: Give her what she wants, or give her nothing.

DEAR ABBY: There must be many others with my problem.

Two years ago I was "the other woman." Today I am "a wicked stepmother" to four teen-agers.

The children and I get along fine. More importantly, my husband and I are very much in love. His "ex" and I do not speak (her terms, not mine).

Problem: My husband wants us to spend a fortune traveling to see his son graduate from high school. While his "ex" hasn't objected, I know this will be an uncomfortable day. Should I stick by my husband's side like glue — or skip the whole scene and stay home by myself? — Happy At Home.

DEAR HAPPY: Stay home and make everyone happier.

DEAR ABBY: Lately you've published several letters about people who have sent gifts and never received an acknowledgement. It happens to me nine out of ten times.

I blame parents and grandparents for furnishing the names of their friends who should be good for at least one $20 spoon toward completing the set of silver.

Now I mail everything insured and if I don't get an acknowledgement in 30 days, I file a claim. Don't think that doesn't shake 'em up. Sometimes I get three thank-you's in one week. From the kids, Mama, and Grandma. — L.W.R.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SIDNEY OMARR

Forecast for Thurs., July 11

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are capable of accepting challenge. Obstacles will be overcome. Know it and be confident. Key is to be aware of details, fine points and small print. Read between the lines and save yourself time and money. Cycle is high; you emerge a winner.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Examine hidden aspects; be aware of subtle nuances. Gemini, Virgo persons could figure in important ways. Key is to get behind the scenes, to gain access to special information. One confined to home, hospital would appreciate being remembered. Do something about it!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't expect too much from well-meaning friends, associates. You will have to attend to basic duties in person. There is confusion evident in those around you — and some envy, too. Know it and prepare accordingly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Go slow. Review possibilities and responsibilities. Accent is on family, security, basic values, ultimate conclusions. Refuse to be pushed or rushed. One who sings blues is testing you. Know it and stand your ground. Pisces, Virgo individuals could figure prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Tie loose ends — check with persons at a distance. Get proper representation. You can expand if positive about personnel — and language. Capricorn may play significant role. Grass is not necessarily greener elsewhere.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't attempt to mix friendship and money, lest you lose in both areas. Emphasis is on the uncovering of documents, the locating of lost articles, the gaining of information which could lead to profit. Aquarian is likely to be in picture.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Lie low. Don't push, force, cajole or whine. If you are quiet within, mate or partner will make wonderful gesture. You will find or rediscover love. But this will occur in meditative fashion, not with sound of firecrackers or trumpets.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your hunches are on target. You gain friend by sharing knowledge. One who aided you in past may make reappearance. Spotlight is on health, work, the understanding of individual who seems rebellious. Your maturity is put to test.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Involvements are not playthings during this period. Know it and don't feel you can get away with putting only a toe in the water. Meaning should become increasingly clear as day progresses. Another Sagittarian — and a Gemini — could be much in picture.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): One who could mean much to you is going through period of depression. Be patient. Don't cast first stone. Check details. Be specific. Take nothing for granted, especially in legal area. Property needs appraisal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Travel may be postponed. Relatives and reservations don't seem to jell. Be aware of reservations. Appointments and public relations require close scrutiny. Gemini, Virgo persons may be telling you some things which are stimulating.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be conservative with assets. Loose ends hang and could snag — at your expense. Family and domestic situation come into sharper focus. Taurus, Libra also are in picture. Money, security, expenditures are featured.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a natural teacher, intuitive, moody, attractive to opposite sex. Mays was an important month — in September you will be on the go, socializing, building future potential. Aquarius and Leo persons play significant roles in your life. You are very loyal where family is concerned.

Choice of Microwave Takes Study

Anyone who has seen a baked potato cooked in 4-6 minutes or a casserole in 8-10 minutes will testify to the almost magical qualities of a microwave oven. Not quite like pulling a rabbit out of a hat, but almost. And that's only one of the reasons why microwave ovens are becoming increasingly popular in Canada today. In fact, nearly 40,000 homes in Canada now have microwave ovens. And by the end of the decade, nearly 1 million Canadian homes will use microwave ovens for most meals, says one manufacturer, GSW Appliances.

Not only can a microwave oven cut down on actual cooking time — more often than not saving up to three quarters of the time compared to cooking the conventional way — but it has many additional advantages. How often, for instance, have you come home from work, a day in town or an outing with the kids and realized you've forgotten to take the meat out of the freezer? If you have a microwave oven, this is no problem, for foods can be fully defrosted in only minutes and cooked straight away. In fact, you could have a complete meal from freezer to table in half an hour. What about the household on the go, where meals are staggered? Once again, with a microwave oven complete meals can be precooked, served onto individual dishes, put in the refrigerator and when needed can just be popped right into the microwave oven — plate and all — and ready to eat, piping hot, in a minute or two. In addition to many conventional oven functions, a microwave oven is also ideal for many of those top-of-the-stove jobs such as cooking puddings, sauces and vegetables — most of which, too, can be prepared, cooked and served in the same dish — thus saving on clean-up time. Particularly in the case of vegetables, the color and flavor often lost in the cooking water when cooking conventionally are retained with microwave cooking because little or no water is usually required. For example, fresh corn on the cob can be cooked in a microwave oven by wrapping it in wax paper or placing it in a covered casserole dish without water.

With the coming of the summer months and those often hot, humid days, you'll welcome the fact that with microwave cooking your kitchen stays cool — only the food gets hot. In addition, the countertop microwave oven is portable and you can take it to your cottage or out onto the patio. You can even use it at the dockside or anywhere where there's a 115-volt grounded outlet. And what's more, you'll save energy, too. In recent engineering tests, Litton-Moffat found that up to a 75 per cent saving of energy can result from using a microwave oven — and that's something in these days of rising fuel costs and shortages. For instance, cooking for a family of four with a microwave oven for a full year costs approximately $6.50 compared with over $25 for a conventional electric range, the company says.

What are the features you should look for when you go shopping for one and how do you get the best value for your money? Here are some tips:

—Check out consumer report publications, and be sure to choose a make where the door stays tightly closed to keep the waves inside.

—The size of your family and lifestyle may well affect your choice of oven. Consider first the size of the oven cavity. This varies considerably. You'll want to use all the standard-sized utensils you have on hand, such as a 12x8" baking dish, a 10" pie or regular plate, and also would likely want to cook large items — maybe a 15-17 lb. turkey for Christmas or Thanksgiving — so check whether the model you are interested in is large enough for these.

—If you have a freezer, which, incidentally, is the ideal appliance to use in conjunction with your microwave oven, you'll probably want to defrost a lot of food, including some fairly large items such as poultry or roasts, and in this case an automatic defrost cycle will be very convenient. In some microwave ovens the defrost method is to set the timer for one or two minutes, allow for a few minutes rest period, set the timer again for another minute or two, and so on. With the automatic defrost cycle, all you have to do is set the time and press the button. In the meantime you can be preparing a salad or setting the table while the meat defrosts itself. The automatic defrost cycle has other advantages, too — in that it's possible to simmer certain foods which generally need slower cooking than can normally be done with a microwave oven. Although you are slowing down the cooking, you will still be saving time compared to the conventional method. So an automatic defrost cycle has very definite dual advantages.

—The flexibility of the timer, too, is an important factor. Check first that it is easy to read and operate. Also does it give you enough time. Timers ranging from 15-60 minutes are now available. A few items may take over 30 minutes or so and you don't want to be continually running back and resetting. Also is it broken down into seconds? The only variable with microwave cooking is time, so you want a timer that allows you to set it for the specific time needed, and many things such as warming butter, bread, rolls, baby bottles, etc., take only seconds.

—How about cleaning up? Because food cooked by microwaves does not stick to or burn on the utensils, neither does it burn on to the oven. But, of course, there are always a few spills and splatters and these should be wiped up after cooking. So look to see if the cooking surface inside the oven will be easy to keep clean.

—Browning of food is important. Generally, large items such as a roast or turkey that are cooked in a microwave oven longer than 10 minutes will brown, but fast-cooking items such as steaks, chops, pancakes and the like require a special browning utensil. So you might weant to look for a microwave oven with such a utensil, which often is included as part of the purchase price. In this way, the oven is taking over even more duties of a conventional range and, indeed, it's possible to do as much as 95 per cent of your cooking the microwave way. And even when food is cooked the conventional way, the microwave oven can be a boon, for it's ideal for reconstituting foods. Many people cook items such as steaks, chops, French toast or waffles the regular way, then freeze them and reconstitute them later in the microwave oven.

Cooking with microwaves is completely different from any other type of cooking and, therefore, initially it is essential to follow recipes that have been specially formulated for microwave cooking. After you've used the oven for some time, then it's possible to start adapting some of your own favorite recipes once you understand the basic principles involved. So before buying a microwave oven, do check to see whether a comprehensive cook book comes with it.

Golden Egg Pasta Just Like Grandma's

PAY ATTENTION to what you buy. This is the cardinal rule set by Pol Martin, director of the Pol Martin Culinary School in Montreal, for those who wish to become great cooks. "No amount of expertise in the kitchen can compensate for lack of freshness in fruits and vegetables, so if they aren't fresh, don't buy," says Martin.

By JOHN HESS

The threatening shortage of macaroni in Italy would not have fazed Marcella Hazan's grandmother. The old woman made pasta every day until her nineties, and when store-bought macaroni then began to appear occasionally on the family table, Mrs. Hazan recalls, "Grandma couldn't understand why they made it."

For her husband, Victor, who bicycles home to their East Side New York apartment for lunch, Mrs. Hazan makes pasta as grandmother used to do it.

Common macaroni is made of flour and water, nothing more. In Emilia Romagna in Northeast Italy, whence the Hazans come, eggs replace the water. Mrs. Hazan says that once one has eaten the homemade variety, one can never again be satisfied by the factory product — even pasta cut at home in one of those little kitchen macchinettas is not as fine as hand-cut pasta, she adds.

Mrs. Hazan describes how to make pasta in her new "The Classic Italian Cook Book" (Harper's Magazine Press). The other day, she demonstrated at home with paglia e fieno, "hay and straw" — a batch of golden egg pasta and another of egg and spinach, both cut into fettuccine and served alla ghiotta, in a sauce of cream, ham and mushrooms.

The essential equipment is a straight, long roller and a clean wooden surface with slightly curved edge. Formica will do, Mrs. Hazan said, but not stone — too cold. Temperature and humidity control the process. For this reason, she encourages much practice and a relaxed, pragmatic attitude.

"You will never know how much flour to use," she explained. "It depends on how much moisture there is in the spinach, and how large the eggs. In the same carton, one egg will have a bigger yolk."

Anyhow, this is how she describes the process:

1. In a mound of about two cups of all-purpose flour, make a well and break two eggs into it. (For spinach pasta, add about half a pound of fresh spinach or a package of frozen, cooked, drained, cooled, squeezed in the hand as dry as possible and chopped.) Beat eggs lightly with a fork a minute or two, then start working flour in with one hand, while supporting the outside wall with the other. When the eggs cease to be runny, tumble the rest of the flour over them and working with palms and fingertips, push and squeeze the eggs and flour until they are a well-combined but somewhat crumbly paste. Add as much flour as the mass will absorb without becoming stiff and dry, but do not exceed one cup of flour per egg.

2. After carefully cleaning the surface and washing hands, knead the dough with the heel of the palm, folding it over and turning it for 8 to 10 minutes, ending with a smooth flattish bun, springy and slightly damp to the touch.

3. Dust the work surface lightly with flour. Open out the ball of dough with the rolling pin, starting to roll at about one-third of the way in on the ball, rolling away from you. Rotate the dough one quarter turn after every roll so that it opens out into an even, circular shape. As it begins to flatten out, gradually lessen the degree of rotation after each roll, but don't lose control of the shape. It must stay as round as possible. Roll it out and away, without putting weight on it. Stop when you have rolled out a sheet one-eighth inch thick.

4. This is the tricky part: stretching the pasta. Curl the far end around the center of the rolling pin and roll it toward you, with both palms cupped over the center. When you have rolled up about a quarter of the sheet, quickly roll the pin backward and forward, and at the same time slide your palms away from each other and toward the ends of the rolling pin, dragging them against the surface of the pasta. Roll up some more of the sheet, and repeat.

By the time the sheet is completely rolled up, you should have repeated the stretching motion 12 to 14 times in eight seconds or less. Unroll the pasta, smooth out, even off edges, dust very lightly with flour if it's sticky, and repeat the operation several times, until the pasta is almost paper thin. The entire step must be carried out in not much more than eight minutes, otherwise the pasta will dry.

5. Roll the sheet of pasta on a rolling pin, lay a clean cloth on a table and unroll the pasta upon it to dry, with about a third hanging over the edge of the table. Turn after 10 minutes to allow another third to hang over, then turn once more. This pasta must be dry enough that the noodle ribbons, when cut, do not stick together, but not so dry that it will crack when folded. In a very hot room the drying may be completed in as little as 15 minutes.

6. Roll up the pasta on the rolling pin and unroll it on the work surface. Fold it over and over into a flat roll about three inches wide. Place one hand on the roll, with fingertips partly drawn back under the knuckles. Leaning the flat side of a straight-bladed knife against the knuckles, slice the pasta to the width desired. The tagliatelli favored in the Northeast are a bit less than a quarter inch wide, fettuccine about half that but made of slightly thicker sheets and so on.

Spread out on a clean towel and allow to firm up for five minutes. The noodles are now ready to cook.

"We think in Italy that the guest waits for the food, the food doesn't wait for the guest," Mrs. Hazan said. She added that the pasta could keep indefinitely, wrapped in a plastic bag but never refrigerated.

Vic West Survey Set

A house-to-house survey will be conducted this month in Victoria West to find out how residents would like $1 million spent for neighborhood improvements.

Neighborhood Improvement Program (NIP) co-ordinator Kay Woods said resident views will establish priorities for community improvements funded through the federal-provincial NIP and Residential Rehabilitation Assistance Program. (RRAP).

An "education week" to introduce residents to the programs will be held this week and those interested can phone the Vic West Community Association centre at 519 Craigflower between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m., at 384-1934.

She said an information meeting will be scheduled about mid-August to discuss residents' priorities.

Under RRAP, residents who earn less than $11,000 a year are eligible to borrow $5,000 at a low interest rate to improve the structure of their home.

Lamb, Beef Or Chicken For Kebabs

In older times, the meat for kebabs was marinated in order to preserve it, as well as tenderize and flavor it.

Although modern refrigeration has rendered obsolete this method of preserving meat, marinating will ensure juicy, tender and flavorful morsels of meat for your next kebabs.

This month, the Peanut Oil Institute offers Lamb Shish Kebabs. Although they have chosen to use lamb, this recipe can also be made with beef or chicken.

LAMB SHISH KEBABS
(4 people)

1½lbs. loin of lamb, cut into 1½" cubes

MARINADE:

1 cup oil
juice of 1½ lemons
½ cup dry white wine
1 garlic clove smashed
16 whole peppercorns
¼ teaspoon thyme
2 bay leaves
1 teaspoon chervil
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon tarragon
1 carrot peeled and thinly sliced
1 onion peeled and thinly slices salt
2 large onions, cut into 4
20 mushroom caps
3 green peppers, in large pieces

Cover the lamb cubes with marinade. Cover with wax paper, refrigerate and marinate the lamb for 8 hours.

Preheat oven to broil, then remove the lamb cubes from the marinade. Reserve the marinade.

Alternate the lamb cubes and the remaining ingredients on 4 skewers.

Broil or barbecue the shish kebabs for 12 to 15 minutes. Baste frequently with the reserved marinade.

TOMATOES, CUKES REACHING PEAK

Did you know that one medium raw tomato provides only 30 calories? Or that one 7½-inch raw cucumber contains only 25 calories?

In season now, B.C. fresh Tomatoes and Cucumbers are featured in a recipe release from the provincial government's B.C. Food Information Service. The pamphlet is at some Victoria food stores but may also be obtained by writing the service care of the Legislative Buildings.

Both hothouse tomatoes and field tomatoes are grown in British Columbia, says the release. The former are available from April to December, while the field tomatoes are harvested from July to October.

In 1973, nearly six million pounds of field tomatoes were produced in B.C. with over 90 per cent of these being grown in the Okanagan-Similkameen region.

An anticipated 5½ million pounds of hothouse tomatoes will be harvested in British Columbia this year, 3½ million pounds on the Lower Mainland, and about 2 million pounds on Vancouver Island.

The consumption of fresh tomatoes is estimated to be 12 pounds per capita in B.C.

When buying tomatoes, look for those which are well formed, smooth, well ripened, and reasonably free from blemishes. Avoid overripe and bruised tomatoes which are soft and watery, and those with sunburn (green or yellow areas near the stem scar).

For the best flavor, tomatoes should be mature when they are purchased or picked. If they are immature, leave them at room temperature but out of direct sunlight to ripen. Once tomatoes are ripened, store them in the refrigerator.

Like tomatoes, cucumbers are also a heat-loving crop. Hothouse cucumbers are of two varieties: White Spines which are 6 to 8 inches in length and available mid-June to October, and Long English cucumbers, the slender, tender variety available April through September. Lower Mainland growers expect a 1974 yield of over 2½ million pounds of Long English cucumbers. Vancouver Island growers anticipate a crop of about 400,000 pounds of White Spines.

Curried Salmon Sandwiches

1 15½ oz. can Gold Seal salmon (or 2-7¾ oz. cans)
1 cup mayonnaise
⅔ cup finely chopped celery
½ cup sliced green onions with tops
1½ tsp. curry powder
1 tsp. salt
4 tblsp. sweet pickle relish
Dash pepper
8 slices bread, toasted and buttered

Separate salmon. Combine salmon with mayonnaise, celery, onions, curry powder, salt, pickle and pepper. Spread salmon mixture on toast slices and arrange on baking sheet. Bake in preheated 375°F. oven for 15 minutes. Makes 8 open-face sandwiches.

fresh B.C. Cherries

July is cherry month . . . and to help you enjoy the fresh sunshine flavour of B.C. Cherries to the full, here is a delicious recipe your whole family will love.

CHERRY CHEESECAKE

CRUST
1 package (4 oz.) Holland rusk, lemon cookies, or graham wafers.
2 tablespoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
6 tablespoons melted butter

FILLING
1 package (8 oz.) plain cream cheese
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1 tablespoon flour
1/8 teaspoon salt
2 eggs, separated
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
1/2 cup dairy sour cream

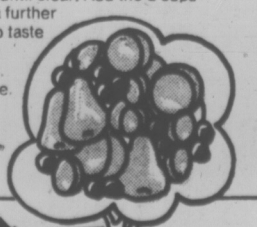
GLAZE
2 pounds fresh B.C. Cherries
3/4 cup granulated sugar
3 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
Dash of salt
1/4 cup cold water
1 teaspoon butter
Red food colouring

Roll rusks, cookies, or graham wafers into crumbs; mix with sugar and cinnamon. Add melted butter and mix well. Press into buttered pan, covering bottom and up the sides.

Have cream cheese and eggs at room temperature. Beat cheese. Add sugar gradually, beating in well. Add flour and salt, mix. Add egg yolks, one at a time, beating thoroughly after each addition. Beat in vanilla, lemon rind, and dairy sour cream.

Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into crust. Bake at 275 degrees F. for 1 1/2 hours, or until filling mixture is firm and lightly browned. Cool pan on rack away from drafts.

Meanwhile, make glaze by pitting cherries and reserving out 2 cups. Mix sugar, cornstarch and salt in a saucepan. Add water; bring to boil and cook until clear. Add the 2 cups reserved cherries and cook a further 5 minutes or until there is no taste of raw starch. Add butter and red food colouring, if desired. Cool. Spoon over cooled cake. Arrange remaining cherries on top. Chill. Serves 8-10.



And remember, July is the time to buy lots of plump, juicy B.C. Cherries for all your home preserving and freezing needs, too.

Disease-Carrying Fly Congo Expedition Aim

LONDON (AP) — An international expedition led by one of Britain's toughest jungle adventurers heads down the Congo River in Africa Oct. 1 on what is considered one of the most dangerous treks in modern history.

It will be the first full-scale attempt to navigate the length of the mysterious, half-charted river — 2,718 miles of treacherous rapids, thick jungle, swamps, crocodiles, deadly snakes and black swarms of disease-carrying mosquitos.

The expedition will be commanded by Maj. John Blashford-Snell, a chunky 37-year-old British army officer who between combat tours in Northern Ireland, Cyprus and Oman has led 12 major expeditions in the world's most formidable regions in the last 14 years.

The last was the 13,000-mile trans-American expedition from Alaska to Tierra del Fuego at the tip of South America in 1971.

With him down the Congo will go 131 men and eight women, all specialists in their own fields — rapid-riders such as American Ron Smith, British army survival expert Sgt. Maj. Eddie McGee, scientist Freddie Rodger, English nurse Pamela Baker and expedition manager Kay Thompson, a widow who is Britain's leading woman explorer.

The expedition's primary aim is scientific research, particularly investigating "river blindness," an affliction transmitted by flies. It affects four out of every five persons living in northern Zaire, formerly the Belgian Congo.

The team is made up mainly of Britons, but also includes Americans, Frenchmen, Belgians, Australians, New Zealanders, Finns, a unit of British Gurkha soldiers from Nepal and some Zairean university researchers.

The $240,000 expedition is sponsored by the British Scientific Exploration Society and The Daily Telegraph newspaper.

The scientists on the expedition plan, among other things, to catalogue plants and insect and river life.

A prime objective is a detailed study on the biology of the vector fly, the carrier of onchoerciasis, the disease that causes "river blindness."

This affliction is caused by tiny worm-like larvae invading the human body, multiplying and working their way into the retina of the eye, eventually causing total blindness for which no cure has yet been discovered.

The vector fly spends much of its life cycle on the Congo and scientists believe a detailed study of it might disclose a way of controlling and possibly eradicating the disease.

Another aim is to trace species of gorillas and chimpanzees in southern Zaire, near the Congo's source, that are believed to be unique.

Sihanouk Rejects Offer

In a statement issued from his Peking residence, the prince denounced the offer as hypocritical and cynical propaganda inspired by Lon Nol's U.S. backers.

The prince accused the U.S. government of responsibility for the war in Cambodia and said that if the U.S. ends its involvement and cuts off military aid to Lon Nol, the Cambodian problem would be resolved without the need for negotiations.

"We shall never accept a compromise with the U.S.A., still less a reconciliation with the traitors," he said.

Fall Election Forecast In Britain

LONDON (Reuter) — Ministers of Britain's minority Labor government have dropped fresh hints of a general election in the fall as the administration prepared short-term measures to deal with the country's economic ills.

Employment Minister Michael Foot said in a radio interview: "We cannot go on as we are now ... We have got to have a majority in the House of Commons. Of course, I think that the sooner we can have that the better for the nation as a whole."

U.S. Rights Champion Dies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The lowed normal procedure of death of Earl Warren, a champion of the Bill of Rights in his 16 years as chief justice, removes a figure indelibly linked to landmark decisions of the United States Supreme Court in one of its most controversial eras.

Warren, 83, died of heart failure in Georgetown University Hospital Tuesday night, a little more than five years after his retirement from the highest judicial post in the U.S.

Under his leadership, the court struck down segregated schools, laid down the rule of "one man-one vote" and greatly expanded the rights of the accused in criminal cases.

Tributes came swifly for the man whose years on the court were marked by criticism, which included demands for his impeachment.

President Nixon, who often was at odds with Warren in their years as California politicians and who criticized many of his court decisions, saluted him as "a partisan for America."

Chief Justice Warren Burger, named by Nixon to succeed Warren and steer the court toward "strict construction" of the Constitution, said "his contribution was large indeed."

Rosa Parks, the black seamstress whose refusal to give up her seat to a white man started the Montgomery bus boycott, said: "We have lost a great friend to humanity."

With him at his death were his wife, Nina, and the youngest of their three daughters, Mrs. Stewart Bien. The Warrens also had two sons.

Warren served as chief justice from 1953 to 1969 after a political career in which he served 11 years as governor of California and twice sought the Republican nomination for president.

He was vice-presidential candidate on the 1948 Republican national ticket headed by the late Thomas Dewey, then governor of New York. They lost to President Harry Truman.

Though he disapproved of outside assisgnments for members of the high court, at age 72 he took on the additional load of heading the commission to investigate the 1973 assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

One of the Warren court's most acclaimed decisions came in June, 1954, when it struck down the doctrine of separate-but-equal schools for the races.

But the decision Warren thought most important was the "one-man one-vote" ruling in 1962 that forced states to reapportion legislative and congressional districts to make them more equal in population.

"Legislators represent people, not trees or acres," he said.

The court's decisions under his leadership expanded the procedural protections available to criminal defendants, earning him criticism from law-and-order advocates. Nixon, campaigning for the presidency in 1968, said the Warren court "strengthened the criminal forces at the expense of the peace forces."

A common threat in decisions of the Warren court was equality—equal schools, equal representation, equal rights. The court consistenaly broadened the application of the Bill of Rights.

Nixon, in a statement from the White House, said:

"Earl Warren not only rendered outstanding service to our country but he was a distinguished figure in the Republican party. In all things, he was never a partisan of political advantage, but always a partisan for America."

EARL WARREN
. . . dead at 83

Justice Thurgood Marshall, speaking on the Black Audio Network, said: "When history is written, he'll go down as one of the greatest chief justices the country has ever been blessed with."

Woman Attacks Authorities For Ripping Down Posters

Special to the Times

PEKING — One of the most persistent critics in the chorus of protest brought forth by Peking's wall poster campaign, a woman party member named Hseuh Pao-jen, attacked the authorities in a new poster Tuesday for surreptitiously removing a large number of the posters at night.

In a pointed reference to the Soviet Union, which has been criticized in the Chinese press for its persecution of dissidents, Miss Hsueh declared that "in the Soviet revisionist social imperialist country it is impossible to have this kind of democracy."

The implication was that "revisionist" elements on the local scene are behind the removal of the posters, two-thirds of which have disappeared in the past week. In Communist jargon the word revisionist is used to characterize people or policies which have the effect of revising or negating the revolution.

This, in fact, is exactly what Miss Hsueh had charged in her two previous posters. At the beginning of the campaign four weeks ago and again last week she alleged that leaders of the Peking Revolutionary Committee were dragging their feet on the current anti-rightist drive, the officially titled campaign to criticize Confucius and Lin Piao, and were actively suppressing all attempts to bring them to book.

The earlier protests were among the casualties of a sudden purge that reduced the poster display in the latter days of last week. Over three nights dozens of the handwritten colored sheets were ripped off the grey walls of Eternal Revolution Street near the revolutionary committee's offices, leaving fewer than a score in place.

At first the purge appeared to be limited to accounts of factional strife in the provinces and elaborations of personal grievances against the bureaucracy, as though the party leaders had decided the protests were getting out of hand and should be limited to the political situation in Peking, the topic that dominated the drive in its early stages.

However, even charges against the local leadership have not been immune. Once the ripping started in earnest even the original script — an indictment of the revolutionary committee by six "masses' representatives" elected during the Cultural Revolution and subsequently ousted — disappeared.

EXCEPTIONAL PUPILS GIVEN SCHOLARSHIPS

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canada Council has awarded $4,000 scholarships to 100 "students of exceptional promise" working for masters of arts degrees in the humanities or social sciences.

The winners were selected by juries of university faculty members from 588 students nominated by their universities.

It is the second year of a five-year program of awarding the arts scholarships. Last year, 100 students were selected from 602 applicants.

Pacific Wind Calibre Lauded

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Fine ensemble playing and flexibility of style were notable features of Tuesday's concert by the Pacific Wind Quintet, with Robin Wood assisting at the piano.

The concert, part of the five-week Summer Music series sponsored by University of Victoria music department, took place in the MacLaurin Auditorium where it will be repeated Thursday.

Playing of such high professional calibre is worth every music-lover's attention and the repeat performance should be rewarded with an even larger audience than was enthusiastically present Tuesday.

What is paramountly important in a chamber music concert of this nature is the quality of the ensemble effect — relationship of the musicians, communication, balance, singleness of concept.

The Pacific Winds — Lanny Pollet, flute, Jesse Read, bassoon, Richard Ely, horn, Eileen Gibson, oboe and Timothy Paridse, clarinet — fulfil these demands unquestionably. And when Robin Wood joined the group for the Poulenc Sextet and Beethoven Quintet, it was the unfolding of another leaf on the same bough.

Choice of program material was intriguing, versatile and not in the least pedantic. The concert began with a spare, rhythmically arresting work by contemporary Canadian composer John Weinzweig and concluded with an unexpected but joyously received encore — the Maple Leaf Rag.

In between there was a melodic and animated Sextet by Poulenc, Beethoven's rich Quintet in E flat and a little-known but charming Quintetto Concertante in D minor by 18th century Italian composer, Giovanni Cambini.

The facility of the Pacific Winds in dealing with Weinzweig's difficult intervals and rhythmic complexities, sustained interest in the unfamiliar idiom and illuminated the composer's clear feeling for the sonorities and character of the instruments.

A brilliant, beautifully shaped performance, in which all the clarity and total purity of the winds was matched by Wood's high artistry and virtuosity at the piano, marked the Poulenc.

The Beethoven Quintet in which only the flute was absent, was performed with stylistic purity and with a technical proficiency underlying the spirit and warmth of interpretation.

Nazi Hunter Jailed

BONN (Reuter) — Nazi-hunter Beate Klarsfled was sentenced Tuesday to two months for attempting to kidnap the former Gestapo chief of Paris, Kurt Lischka, and return him to France to serve a life sentence imposed in absentia.

The prosecution had asked for a suspended sentence for the 35-year-old woman. The two-week trial was marked by clashes between police and former French resistance fighters.

AN EYE FOR EYES

MANCHESTER, England (Reuter) — A thief who broke into the Royal Eye Hospital here stole a case containing 800 glass eyes of assorted colors and sizes.

And to make sure he could make use of them he also stole a machine for polishing and grinding the eyes.

Snake-Pit Winner at Last

AMARILLO, Tex. (UPI) — Rick Rust had planned to spend 15 days in a six-foot, covered pit making friends with a half-dozen snakes and establishing a world endurance record for that sort of activity.

But the day he was to emerge, claim his title, kiss a beauty queen and collect the money donated by onlookers, the August issue of Playboy magazine arrived in the Texas Panhandle, detailing a California go-go girl's 25-day burial with a pack of reptiles.

Rust, 18, decided to maintain his underground household and sidestep the venomous critters for a few more days.

After 25 days, one hour and 40 minutes and one rattlesnake bite Rust climbed out of his pit. He said Tuesday the snakes became accustomed to his presence and did not bother him when he did not bother them — which was almost all of the time.

Rust received the snake bite when he rolled over onto a rattler during his sleep. He was treated in the pit.

Gate donations for his adventure totaled more than $5,000.

Wives Musn't Learn From Husbands

WARSAW — Husbands can no longer teach their wives to drive under new regulations aimed at improving road safety in Poland.

NEW YORK — Actor Burt Reynolds has filed a $3 million suit against a photographer and a publishing firm charging unauthorized use of one of the his almost-nude pictures.

Named as defendants in the suit, Reynolds' press agent said, were photographer Francesco Scavullo and the MacFadden Bartell Corp., publisher of Motion Picture magazine.

Wispy, grey-haired Robert H. Simpson did just that Monday. He staged a protest, goaded police into arresting him and was hauled off to jail — for the 294th time, by his count.

But Connors, the men's Wimbledon champion, wasn't about to speculate whether he could beat his fiancee in a tennis match.

"That's one court I'll stay off of," Connors said.

DENVER — Anne-Marie Sanquist has won — by forfeit — the battle to play baseball for the all-boy Most Precious Blood Catholic Church Tigers.

The 9-year-old won a starting position as second baseman when the Catholic Youth Recreation Association said it didn't have the money to fight a district judge's injunction allowing Anne-Marie to play and reinstating coach Mike Ousley who was fired for allowing her on the team in the first place.

ATHENS — A Canadian woman and a young Briton, both in jail here awaiting trial on drug charges, were married Tuesday.

Linda Blow, 22, from Sydney, N.S., AND Jeffrey Hocknell, 24, from Stoke-on-Trent, England, were granted a three-hour pass to get married.

The police department presented them with a wedding cake with their names on it. Drinks consisted of canned fruit juice.

BATON ROUGE, La. — Michael Fuori is fighting monthly alimony payments of $858 on the grounds the state alimony law denies equal protection to husbands.

"It is no answer to say that it is usually the wife who is in need and not the husband," Fuori said. "This may have been true 50 to 100 years ago but it is no longer the case."

A Few Good Pointers Growing Citrus Fruits

Indoor gardeners who grow citrus-type plants in pots are destined to have problems arising, from the nature of their project.

Most commonly grown here as small potted plants are lemon, orange and grapefruit trees from seeds out of fruits purchased for food.

This is indeed a worthy project as being of great interest to small children to make them aware of the fact that foods they like most are grown on plants, or in some cases are the entire plants.

While many people in this part of Canada are now familiar with Southern California citrus areas in general, few have more than the knowledge that the climate is usually sunny and warm the year around. The soil of the citrus groves, the low night temperatures in winter, how often the groves are watered by artificial irrigation systems, these are details which commonly escape the casual visitor or tourist.

Fruits from other countries, South Africa, Israel and countries bordering the Mediterranean Sea require a different set of conditions. Most of the raw citrus fruits bought here have been grown in California.

The soil in the pot for a citrus (lemon, orange, grapefruit) should be a mixture of rotted compost, rough peatmoss well soaked, and coarse sand. Even fine gravel is preferable to fine sand, for drainage must be perfect or the plant dies.

When potting up the seedling after sprouting and forming a few roots and two or three leaves, put it first into a three-inch pot remembering to have a few small stones over the hole in the bottom of the pot.

By the time repotting is needed, as shown by roots showing at the drainage hole and reaching to the side of the pot, choose one with a five-inch diameter. Use the same soil mixture, with a half-inch of stones at the bottom; and plant very firmly.

Firm planting entails placing the complete rootball from the small pot on enough new soil in the larger pot to have the finished surface level to the same point on the stem of the plant. Then fill in around the edges and tamp the extra soil with what is known as a potting stick.

The purpose of the potting stick (a blunt ended piece of wood) is to make the soil just firm enough to restrict root growth without impoverishing the top growth.

Temperatures in winter can go down to 45 degs. F. at night and up to 70 by day; in summer the extremes can be and 75 or higher.

Put the plants out by middle of June, and in by September.

During spring and summer, water liberally. Allow the surplus to remain in the dish below for a half-hour, then empty. In winter, a five-inch pot may need watering twice a month if the lower temperatures suggested are met.

Weak fertilizer is given only when a pot is full of roots and only during early summer, never at other times.

Provide full daylight indoors during winter; in summer, allow sunshine but not blistering sun, outdoors. On hot days, move the plant to broken sunlight and water liberally.

Sundecks and apartment balconies are ideal spots for these plants if a suitably cool sunny place is provided indoors for winter.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

When today's deal came up in a top-level rubber-bridge game, our South declarer fulfilled his slam contract. But even in victory he was not sure whether he played the hand correctly, from a mathematical point of view. However, if success is the criterion, it cannot be said that his line of play was incorrect.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

♡ Q 9 6 4
◇ A 8 6

WEST
♠ K Q 10 6 2
♡ K 2
◇ 9 7 5 3

EAST
♠ J 7 5 4 3
♣ Q J 9

SOUTH
♠ A 8
♡ A J 10 8 7 5
◇ K 4
♣ K 5 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

After winning the opening lead with his spade ace, South promptly led his remaining spade and ruffed it. Next came the queen of trumps, and when East followed suit with the three, South spurned the finesse and put up his ace.

He next played the king and ace of diamonds, after which he ruffed the board's remaining diamond. This was followed by the king and ace of clubs. Now a trump was led, and West won the trick with the king.

West was end-played. Whether he returned a spade or a diamond, it would be ruffed in dummy; and on this trick South would discard his losing club. Of course, if West, rather than East, had possessed the high queen of clubs, he would have cashed that card, for the setting trick.

It is a moot question as to whether the line of play that declarer took offered the 50-50 chance that he would have had if he had elected to take the trump finesse. In this deal, however, his play worked out beautifully, for if he had taken the trump finesse, West would have won the trick with his king. In time, East's queen of clubs would have taken the setting trick.

When I spoke to South after the deal had been played, he stated that the play for the drop of the king of trumps was not too remote a possibility. And that this, combined with the hope of an end play, was superior to the taking of the trump finesse.

It should be noted that declarer's line of play would have been successful if West had held only one club. And it should also be noted that if East held the doubleton K-x of trumps, and either a singleton or a doubleton club, South would have fulfilled the contract as he played it.

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — Argentina may have the first woman president in the world, but its constitution demands that she be addressed as a man. The presidential press office ruled Tuesday that Maria Estela Peron, who succeeded her late husband, Juan Peron, as president last week, will be called "presidente" not "presidenta," because that's what the Argentinian constitution requires.

Mozambique Rebels Take Fight-Talk Stance

By PETER YOUNGHUSBAND

CAPETOWN (WP) — Hopes of the new liberal Portuguese provisional government under President Antonio de Spinola for a speedy end to the guerrilla war in Mozambique seem to be crumbling.

In spite of earnest efforts by the Spinola government to come to terms with the rebels and grant Mozambique its independence by democratic procedures, the Front for the Liberation of Mozambique (Frelimo) has intensified its attacks — and in one area they struck daily last month, according to army communiques.

A communique issued by the Portuguese military high command in Mozambique over the weekend said that in spite of all the efforts being made there had not been a cease fire in Mozambique and the armed forces therefore "continued to co-operate in the protection of the population attacked by Frelimo guerrillas."

Frelimo no longer had any reason to carry on fighting, as the armed forces — in which there has a majority of Mozambique citizens — were committed to uphold democratic freedoms, the communique said.

Referring to operations by the Frelimo guerrillas, the communique recounts that in June, 18 members of the security forces, 45 Frelimo men and 36 African civilians lost their lives and 27 security members of the security forces, four Frelimo and 48 African civilians were injured. In addition, 321 tribes people had been abducted.

Frelimo had attacked 32 "defenceless villages," laid 10 ambushes and were involved in 19 armed robberies.

The high command added that the desire for peace was one of the fundamental points of the armed forces movement responsible for the April 25 Lisbon coup, and that the provisional government had opened talks with "the movement that started the war against the government toppled by the armed forces" in the sincere intention of achieving peace."

However, it is widely believed among political observers in Africa that the attacks are designed to strengthen Frelimo's position with Portugal at the bargaining table.

It has all become an unhappy situation for President de Spinola. Success for his provisional government depended very much on a swift decolonization program for Portugal's three African territories — Mozambique, Angola and Guinea-Bissau.

In the case of Angola and Guinea-Bissau the outlook seems better. While talks have proceeded with the liberation organization responsible for insurrection in those colonies, the fighting has subsided significantly.

In Mozambique, however, the more aggressive Frelimo fighters are demanding independence on their own terms which even some radical African politicians privately concede are hardly democratic.

At talks early last month in Lusaka, Zambia the new Portuguese Communist foreign minister, Antonio Soares explained to Frelimo leader Samora Machel and his aides that having just released Portugal from a fascist dictatorship, the new provisional government first wished to restore constitutional government to Portugal with free elections and then follow the same program for the African territories.

Independence would be granted to each of the basis of free elections — in which Frelimo could (in the case of Mozambique) compete as a political party.

This was rejected by the Frelimo leaders. Machel told newsmen afterwards: "We have not fought this liberation war for 13 years to then have to take our chance as a political party in a general election."

President de Spinola, due to visit Mozambique and Angola this month, has had to postpone his trip due to the worsening security situation in Mozambique as well as growing tensions in his own cabinet in Lisbon.

Meanwhile white settlers' fears of the mounting terror campaign by Frelimo and the army's apparent failure to contain it have blossomed into the larger fear of what might happen to the 270,000 whites under an independent black government in a country of 10 million Africans.

This has triggered off a secret white right-wing settler terrorist movement — similar to the Algerian settler backlash 10 years ago — and there have already been a number of attacks on white liberals in Lourenco Marques, capital of Mozambique.

An attempt was made on the life of a Liberal lawyer, the wife of another lawyer was beaten up and a newspaperman of known liberal views was attacked and badly beaten. Bomb and machine gun attacks have been made on the premises of persons sympathetic to Frelimo.

The Portuguese army has moved in troop reinforcements — as well as a further 30 fighter planes — to build up military strength. But for reasons best known to themselves Portuguese have also weakened their military position by pulling back garrisons and outposts close to the Tanzanian border across which the guerrillas are raiding. The guerrillas have now secured a virtual stranglehold on the vital supply lines by rail and Tete and the giant Cabora road to the northern region of Bassa hydro-electric project being constructed there.

Housing Slacken

CMHC said in a news release preliminary figures for June indicate housing starts in urban areas reached 19,361, down eight per cent from 20,946 in the same month a year ago. Starts in the first six months of the year were 90,849, about one per cent below the 92,222 total in the same period last year.

House production to the end of May had been running slightly ahead of last year's rate.

Some major builders, such as H. Keith Morley of Toronto, president of Richard Costain Canada Ltd., have predicted a sharp plunge in residential construction activity this year because of tight money conditions.

Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford has said he does not expect a significant decline in housing starts this year. He has stated the government still is meeting or surpassing the annual target of 250,000 units set by the Economic Council of Canada.

There were more than 268,000 housing starts last year and houses were being built in June at a rate which would work out to 250,000 a year, CMHC said.

The corporation said the January-to-June total this year reflects a six-per-cent gain in single-detached housing starts and a seven-per-cent decline in multiple-housing activity.

Employable Singles Have Welfare Cut at Coquitlam

In adopting the motion, the council is following the lead of nearby Surrey, whose council voted in May to follow a policy it has set over the past few years and cut off all payments to employable adults between 19 and 35 who have no dependents.

Human Resources Minister Norman Levi has threatened to cut off provincial funds to Surrey's welfare program unless the payments are restored.

But Surrey Mayor Bill Vander Zalm has said the municipality will close its welfare department rather than give in to the threat.

Port Coquitlam Ald. Phil Ranger told Monday's council meeting he was not interested in how many persons would be affected or if any money would be saved.

"We are trying to save people," he said. "It worked before. These people found jobs and did not come back to collect welfare when the time expired and they could have reapplied."

Quebec City Ends Year With Big Deficit

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec City ended its 1973-74 fiscal year with a $3.7 million deficity, says Mayor Gilles Lamontagne.

This brings the city's total consolidated debt to $118.2 million, he added.

The mayor predicted earlier a deficit of $5.7 million, but a $1.5 million provincial grant this year and a new policy of returning 50 per cent of all meal and hotel taxes to the city helped keep the figure down, he said Monday.

Bus Crash Kills 22 in Pakistan

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (UPI) — Two buses, one bound for a religious shrine, collided and burst into flames near Multan in Punjab province Tuesday. Police said 22 persons burned to death and 24 others were injured.

ONLY $26,900

There is no catch. The lot is worth $21,000 alone and building $5,900 so for a total of $26,900, who says there are no more bargains around, and what better value relation of lot to dwelling to protect your investment. No it's not a palace, neither is it a dump, but located in good area on a lot 50x114, where a good vegetable garden could substantially beat escallating cost of food. Brand new stucco job, sound roof, good wiring, plumbing and OOM furnace. The living rm. is small, but there is a lge. family kitchen, 2 bedrms, and plnd. for washer and dryer. Bsmt. not high but provides lots of storage and here's a real bonus—there is a floor of mtge. at $7000 at the low, low interest of 5 per cent at $100 per month and low taxes of only $244 gross. The price is right to beat inflation and high cost of living—Act now, ph. Morris Lund 386-3585.

ELIZABETH the SECOND, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom, Canada and Her other Realms and Territories, Queen, Head of the Commonwealth, Defender of the Faith. To all to whom these presents shall come GREETING.

J. A. LORIMER,
Minister of Municipal Affairs.

WHEREAS pursuant to the provisions of Subsection (7) of Section 50 of the Health Act, the Lieutenant-Governor in Council has by Order-in-Council No. 1640 dated the 16th day of May, 1974, made the following regulation:

"The Capital Regional District is authorized to assume the exercise of the powers and duties of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health, AND FURTHER ORDERS THAT the Capital Regional District shall exercise the powers and duties of the local Boards of Health within its jurisdiction, namely District of Oak Bay, City of Victoria, Township of Esquimalt, District of Saanich, District of Central Saanich, District of North Saanich and Town of Sidney."

AND WHEREAS pursuant to the provisions of subsection 6 of section 47 of the Health Act, the Lieutenant-Governor in Council has by Order-in-Council No. 1641 dated the 16th day of May, 1974, made the following regulation:

"The Capital Regional District is authorized to assume the exercise of the powers and duties of the Victoria and Esquimalt Union Board of Health and the Saanich and South Vancouver Island Union Board of Health;

AND FURTHER ORDERS THAT the Capital Regional District shall exercise the powers and duties of the Local Boards of Health within its jurisdiction, namely District of Oak Bay, City of Victoria, Township of Esquimalt, District of Saanich, District of Central Saanich, District of North Saanich and Town of Sidney."

AND WHEREAS the Regional Board of the Capital Regional District has requested that the powers and duties as may be necessary to enable it to provide and administer within the Capital Regional District, all community health services and programmes required by statute or approved by the Minister of Health including Public School Health Services, be a function of the Capital Regional District.

NOW KNOW YE THAT, by these presents We do order and proclaim the following be added to the objects, powers, obligations, duties, limitations and conditions of the Capital Regional District, and the Letters Patent of the Capital Regional District be amended accordingly.

DIVISION XI—COMMUNITY HEALTH

1. Commencing on the 1st day of April, 1974, it shall be a function of the Capital Regional District, within the regional district to exercise the powers and duties conferred by the said regulations and any amendments thereto and such further powers and duties as may be necessary to enable it to provide and administer within the Capital Regional District, all community health services and programmes required by statute or approved by the Minister of Health including Public School Health Services.

2. All member municipalities participate in the function of the Capital Regional District provided by this Division.

3. Prior to the 31st day of October in each year the Regional District shall prepare a budget for the function provided by this Division for the immediately ensuing year in co-operation with representatives of the Provincial Government.

4. The Capital Regional District shall be reimbursed by the Government of the Province of British Columbia for seventy per centum of the total annual costs of the said community health services and programmes including capital, operating and administrative costs incurred by the Capital Regional District hereafter called "the Provincial Government Share" in the following manner:

The Provincial Government shall estimate the Provincial Government share prior to the commencement of each fiscal year of the Capital Regional District and shall pay one-twelfth thereof to the Capital Regional District on the first day of each month during such fiscal year. As soon as possible after each three month period during the said fiscal year the Capital Regional District shall submit to the Provincial Government the actual costs incurred by it during such period and any overpayment or under-payment shall be adjusted forthwith thereafter.

5. The net cost incurred by the Capital Regional District pursuant to paragraph 4 hereof for the purpose of this Division shall be apportioned among the member municipalities on the basis of one hundred per centum of the assessed value of land and seventy-five per centum of the assessed value of improvements as fixed for taxation for school purposes in the current year, excluding property that is taxable for school purposes only by Special Act.

6. The levy against properties within the electoral areas of the Capital Regional District, shall be reduced by thirty per centum of the cost of providing health services within those electoral areas and which, based upon the 1973-74 fiscal period of the Province, has been calculated at about $75,000.00 or .75 mills.

7. The levels of the various community health services and programmes to be provided as aforesaid by the Capital Regional District shall be at service levels acceptable to the Minister of Health.

8. The Regional Board may employ such officers and employees, professional and otherwise, as are required for the purpose of the function provided by this Division.

9. The professional officers and employees employed by the Regional Board shall be of a standard at least equal to that established by the Minister of Health for such employment.

10. Subject to the Health Act, Medical Health Officers shall be appointed by the Regional Board in consultation with the Provincial Department of Health.

11. The Officers and employees of the Capital Regional District operating and administering this function shall avail themselves of the consultative services provided by the Department of Health.

12. The minimum health programmes and services for children including those enrolled in the public school system provided and administered by the Capital Regional District in the school districts within the Capital Regional District shall be not less than those programmes and services defined in the Health Branch Policy Manual, Volume III, Chapter XIII as published in August, 1971 as amended from time to time. Professional activities with dual roles in health and education shall be carried out as follows:

(a) Psychologists — those utilized by the Capital Regional District shall be employed by the Mental Health Branch of the Department of Health of the Province of British Columbia.

(b) Psychometricians — this service is the responsibility of the school districts.

(c) Speech Therapists — those utilized in the community shall be employed by the Capital Regional District. Those utilized solely in the schools shall be the responsibility of the school districts.

(d) Audiologists — shall be utilized in the community and shall be employed by the Capital Regional District.

(e) Learning Disability Therapists — may be employed by the school districts and the assistance of other agencies may be utilized.

(f) Vision and Hearing — screening of children shall be the responsibility of the Capital Regional District.

(g) Other pertinent services for the prevention of illness and maintenance of health among children shall be provided by the Capital Regional District after negotiation between the Capital Regional Board and the School Boards involved subject to the approval of the Minister of Health.

13. Community health services and programmes provided and administered by the Capital Regional District shall include the provision and administration of inspection, referral, educational and other non-therapeutic dental health services to school and pre-school children.

14. At least once each year on or before the first day of October, school health services in the Capital Regional District shall be reviewed by the Capital Regional District Board with representatives of the various School Boards within the Capital Regional District to ensure an adequate opportunity for programme and service recommendations to be received.

15. The annual net cost of the function provided by this Division shall not exceed the product of two mills on the assessed value of property as fixed for taxation for school purposes in the current year within the participating member municipalities excluding property that is taxable for school purposes only by Special Act.

16. The powers, duties, and obligations of all participating member municipalities and any other local authorities to perform the function conferred on the Capital Regional District pursuant to this Division shall be transferred to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Capital Regional District including, but without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the powers conferred upon the Council of a Municipality by section 634 of the Municipal Act.

AND THAT the Letters Patent of the Capital Regional District be deemed to be further amended accordingly.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed.

WITNESS: The Honourable Walter S. Owen, Q.C., LL.D., Lieutenant-Governor of Our said Province of British Columbia, in Our City of Victoria, in Our said Province, this 16th day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and seventy-four, and in the twenty-third year of Our Reign. By Command.

E. HALL, Provincial Secretary.

B.C. Planning Bulk Port Imports

In an effort to cut costs, the Liquor Administration Board is going to import Portugeese port by bulk container ship.

A 26-ounce bottle of LAB port jumped from $3.15 to $6.40 a bottle in June and Eagle 3 Portuguese port, from $3.90 to $6.55.

Purchasing agent Bob Mason said today he's sorry people are "shocked" at the increases, which he says are due to the rising standard of living in Portugal.

Mason said, apart from the higher cost of the port, the 110-gallon puncheons (oak casks) in which the port is transported have taken a drastic jump in cost.

As an experiment, the LAB has now ordered shipment by bulk container. Mason said this will probably take three months to be delivered.

The price increases, Mason said, were made in order to keep in line with the policy of setting profits at 110 per cent of costs.

Oil Group Happy Grits 'Free' of NDP

CALGARY (CP) — The manager of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada says he hopes the majority Liberal government, "free now of the New Democratic Party," will take a realistic view of Canada's energy policy.

G. W. "Scotty" Cameron said he is looking for an early statement from the new government which will clear away some of the uncertainties about energy policy.

"The state of confrontation between the federal and provincial governments over energy issues must be resolved quickly," he said.

In a separate statement, the chairman of Canada's largest oil company said the issues facing the petroleum industry have not been changed by the federal election.

J. A. Armstrong, chief executive officer of Imperial Oil Ltd. said events in the past few months have made it increasingly difficult for the petroleum industry to plan "the major projects and programs that must be undertaken."

He said governments must adopt public policies that will remove the uncertainties clouding the developing of future energy supplies.

Sir Harry Brittain Dies at Age 100

One of Britain's most colorful newspaper figures, Sir Harry was the founder of the Commonwealth Press Union, an organization representing some 500 newspapers around the world.

Lawyer, journalist, traveller and politician, he was a greater admirer of Canada. He crossed the country about a dozen times, recalling that "the West was really wild and woolly the first time," in 1903.

Brittain held an honorary degree from McGill University and was made an honorary life member of the Canadian Legion in 1958.

The list of persons he knew on a first-name basis included author Mark Twain, the Duke of Windsor and many others.

The tall, angular figure was on the original committee which in 1914 was set up to commemorate 100 years of peace between Britain and the United States.

Last year he was awarded the Commonwealth Press Union's highest honor, the Astor Award, for his contribution to Commonwealth understanding.

Drinkers Drink City Dry

Times News Services

Chicago cops shucked their ties, and beer drinkers drank Minneapolis dry during the first real hot spell in the U.S. East and Midwest Tuesday.

From northern Texas to southwestern Iowa, the heat was on. Demand for electricity soared. Livestock and fire danger warnings went up for Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas.

Chicago reported a record high of 98 degrees for the date. Hot weather also prevailed in the east from North Carolina to New England. Kids in New York City splashed through the spray of open fire hydrants.

Hamm's Brewery in Minneapolis reported beer deliveries could not keep up with demand. Air conditioning, swimming pool and beer salesmen in Milwaukee were equally estatic.

"Hey, with weather like this, they'll suck up anything," a Milwaukee beer salesman said.

"It's a salesman's delight," a clerk at the air conditioning section of a department store said. "The heat will do it every time."

Pavements buckled on highways throughout the midwest.

The combination of 90-degree heat, increased electrical usage and equipment breakdowns forced utilities to cut voltage five per cent for Tuesday after the demand for customers from Maine to Virginia.

The New England Power Exchange lowered voltage electricity to run cooling devices caught the utility with six power plants out of service due to mechanical troubles or scheduled maintenance operations.

Memphis in '75 For Ottawa Ace

MEMPHIS (AP) — Memphis Southmen of the World Football League say they have signed offensive and defensive tackle Charlie Brandon for the 1975 season.

Brandon, 6-foot-4, 260 pounds, has been with Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian Football League for the last three seasons. He was the most valuable player in the 1973 Grey Cup game.

Beer Bus Is Too Comfortable For Strikers, Say Employers

VANCOUVER (CP) — A posh bus that offers coffee, cookies and soft-cushioned couches for people on picket lines is causing some cool feelings between company bosses and a major brewery.

Some employers, it appears, are convinced the company services caravan operated by Carling O'Keefe gives just a bit too much aid and comfort to striking unionists.

On several occasions irate employers sitting in shutdown plants have phoned the brewery to criticize company officials for supporting striking workers. But it's not so, a brewery spokesman says.

"What we do does not affect a strike one way or the other. We do not take sides in a labor dispute," the spokesman said.

"But the guys who trudge picket lines are the guys that buy our beer. They are our customers and if we can do anything to keep them happy, we will do it."

He said they invite the management people who have a "beef" to come out and have coffee. So far, there have been no takers.

The bus contains a complete electronic system including a stereo, public address system, eight-track cartridge and reel-to-reel tape recorders, a record and microphone system and even a first aid kit.

Harold "Red" Schaible, a representative of the brewery who travels with the bus, says: "We also try to turn up as emergency situations such as fires, where we provide the same kind of service for firemen and police."

Liquor board rules prevent the brewery from offering free samples of its own product.

Husband 'Wrassles,' Wife Kills Intruder

MIAMI (AP) — An elderly man disarmed a teen-age intruder — and his wife killed the would-be robber.

"I was so mad I just wanted to pop him once real good in the face," said Hiram Porter, 79. "I can't remember ever being that mad before.

"It didn't take courage to wrassle with him — I was just mad."

Police said porter's wife, Ella, 55, killed Michael Perpall, 18, with a single shot in the chest after he broke into their cottage at a senior citizens' housing project.

Porter, a retired airline employee, says he ignored his arthritic knee and wrested a rifle out of the youth's hands as they fought their way from the kitchen, through the living room and onto the front porch.

"He just came right in and bammed me with the rifle butt in the face," Porter said later as he nursed a blue swelling on one eye.

Porter managed to get the youth's rifle and toss it into the living room as the struggle continued, Mrs. Porter heard her husband shout for help and went running with his .22-calibre revolver. She started firing and one shot hit the youth in the chest.

Police said Perpall, on probation after two breaking and entering convictions, died less than an hour later.

Insuring Cattle Mulled

VANCOUVER (CP) — A government joint committee studying predator problems in British Columbia is considering various forms of compensation for livestock producers, a spokesman for Recreation and Conservation Minister Jack Radford said Monday.

He was commenting on a call for compensation by the B.C. Cattlemen's Association, which has said the number of beef cattle killed by predators has increased dramatically this year.

The spokesman said a joint committee of the agriculture department and the conservation department's fish and wildlife branch is studying compensation programs in other parts of North America to see if such a program is feasible in B.C.

"What you're talking about is a form of insurance program," he said. "Someone is going to have to pay for a compensation program."

He said problems with predators is particularly bad in regions such as the Bulkey Valley and Chilcotin regions where agricultural land is spreading into wildlife areas.

Winds Storms Rip Ontario

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Violent electrical and wind storms which hit three areas of southern Ontario Tuesday sent 11 people to hospital and left a trail of fallen trees, blocked roads and damaged buildings in their wake.

A storm which ripped its way through the resort town of Tweed, 20 miles north of Belleville, Tuesday night damaged as many as 45 homes and four businesses, police said.

Power and telephone lines were knocked down and while hydro workmen restored power to the northern part of the community shortly before midnight, they said it will take most of today before power is restored to the southern section.

Eight London, Ont. campers staying at a trailer park near Tweed were taken to hospital after winds estimated at between 50 and 90 miles an hour knocked a 30-foot tree over on to their trailer.

Hazel Kelly, 36 is listed in fair condition in Belleville General Hospital with neck injuries, ehile her daughter Catharine, 15, is in satisfactory condition with head injuries.

Three other members of the Kelley family, Raymond, 39, Robin, 13, and Ronney, 16, and Heather Jones, 13, Donna Jones, 15, and Phillip Morris, 21, were treated for cuts and bruises and released from hospital.

A Tweed woman, Mary Tustin, 32, was also injured while visiting the campground.

Strong winds also caused injuries and damage at a trailer camp near Tilbury, about 15 miles southwest of Chatham.

Ann Stillaway, 30, of Callander, Ont., was admitted to hospital after ambulance crews worked for 15 minutes to free her from her rented trailer, which had been tossed about 60 feet by the storm.

Provincial police said no funnel was sighted and it is not believed a tornado was involved.

High winds and rain also smashed cottages, trailers and buildings in Alban, 35 miles southeast of Sudbury, causing damage police estimated will amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The 25-minute storm struck about 3:45 p.m. after a day of hot weather, and swept through an area about 1½ miles wide and eight miles long, around the French River tourist centre.

A woman staying in one of 30 trailers upset or blown about by the wind in a trailer camp suffered a broken leg and was admitted to Sudbury General Hospital.

Police said about 100 private cottages were damaged or destroyed hundreds of trees uprooted and access roads to many tourist lodges blocked by fallen trees.

Repair crews were working Tuesday to restore electricity and telephone service to about 200 private homes, cottages and businesses.

Fall Victim's Ribs Broken

A woman who fell out of a window of the Regency Shields Hotel, 724 Yates, July 1, died of chest injuries, a pathologist testified at an inquest Tuesday.

Dr. Bruce Hay said an autopsy revealed Dorothy Moraes, 51, had broken ribs and internal bleeding.

The inquest was adjourned to Aug. 12, when eye witnesses are expected to testify.

Man Charged With Knifing

Victoria police have charged a 31-year-old man in connection with a stabbing at the Century Inn beer parlor last month.

David John Ross, of no fixed address, appeared in Victoria provincial court this morning and was remanded to July 17 for election of trial method and plea. He was retained in custody until Thursday for bail application.

Ronald Paul Cooper, 29, was stabbed in the back and chest during a disturbance in the beer parlor June 20. He was hospitalized and, for a time listed in fair condition. He has since recovered.

Moonrock Show Rescheduled

Moonrock samples will be on display at the Provincial Museum in August through the co-operation of the U.S. Information Service.

The lunar display was originally scheduled for viewing at the Museum July 3, but that engagement was postponed.

UVic Students Get Study Funds

University of Victoria sociology student S. H. Dier and linguistics student S. M. Rose are among 100 Canadians to receive $4,000 Canada council scholarships for graduate studies.

Announced for the 1974-75 academic year the scholarships were given to winners selected from 588 candidates nominated by university faculty members across the country.

Symphony Liaison Urged

Suggested formation of a liaison committee to give Victoria Symphony board a little more say in selection of "expensive guest artists and choice of music" brought protests at a symphony society board meeting Tuesday.

The suggestion was made by president Miss M. E. Ronahan from a previous executive meeting.

She said the executive had heard criticism from the public regarding the importing of costly artists at a time when the symphony was having financial difficulties.

But the concept of the board stepping into an area not in their jurisdiction but strictly that of the musical director—shocked board member Murray Adaskin.

The move was impossible, said Adaskin. "I speak with absolute authority from the years I spent with the Toronto Symphony."

He maintained that it is the job of the director to select guest artists and music and the board's responsibility to see that the orchestra gets every possible assistance to function properly.

Executive member Stuart Underhill said it was not the intention to interfere in choice of artists or music but simply a means of opening a direct and more immediate channel of communication between the artistic director and the board.

Music director Laszlo Gati said that in the matter of guest artists, he operated within a budget. If costs beyond the budget became apparent, it had then always been necessary for him to consult with the executive.

A motion to outline clearly the functions of the liasion committee would be made at the next board meeting, Aug. 27, Underhill promised.

With regard to the financial problems, which include a current deficit of $45,000, a proposed change in society membership regulations was again submitted.

This would mean a small fee, providing for several benefits, would be entailed in becoming a member of the society. Purchase of season tickets alone is the present membership qualification. The submission made by director J. S. Beattie was sent to committee for study and recommendation.

With regard to Canada Council aid, Miss Ronahan said she had been advised that this year's grant would amount to $40,000 with a possible additional $4,000 as an artists-in-residence grant. (The 1972-73 grant was $28,000).

Agreeing that this grant is low in comparison with others, Miss Ronahan told the board that according to council spokesman it was 28 per cent above last year's and therefore a bigger increase than had been given any other similar group.

A letter confirming the grant had yet to be received, she said.

With a new season soon to begin, Underhill asked whether the budget was ready for presentation.

Finance committee chairman E. T. M. McBride, said only an approximate budget could be offered.

Without knowledge of what will be involved in contracts or what grants will be available, the budget could not be completed. However, most of the factors will be known and a budget prepared for the August meeting, McBride assured the members.

91st YEAR, No. 26 ★★ VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, JULY 10, 1974 15 CENTS DAILY, 20 CENTS SATURDAY

50% LOSE DEPOSIT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nearly 50 per cent of the 110 federal candidates in British Columbia lost their $200 deposits Monday after failing to poll half as many votes as the winners in their ridings.

Among the 54 suffering $200 setbacks were 12 NDP candidates and one Liberal. All the Social Credit candidates, Communists, Marxist-Leninists and independents lost their deposits.

Throughout the country, the 16 candidates who ran for Communist or Marxist-Leninist parties all lost their deposits. It was the first time they ran as official party candidates.

Price Index Jump At 23-Year High

OTTAWA (CP) — A 1.3-per-cent increase during June in the consumer price index has pushed the index to its largest 12-month increase in 23 years, Statistics Canada reported today.

The June level was 11.4 per cent higher than it was in June, 1973. Not since the Korean War, when the index went up by 11.8 per cent between August, 1950, and August, 1951, has there been a larger 12-month increase.

Higher costs for food, transportation and housing accounted for a major share of the June increase.

During the last two months the consumer price index has gone up by three per cent as prices of food and petroleum products have climbed sharply higher.

In June the largest contributors to the gain in the index were higher prices for fresh produce, restaurant meals, fuel oil for homes and gasoline for cars.

Compared with a year ago, the largest price increases were for food. The index for restaurant meals was up by 20.7 per cent and for food eaten at home 16.7 per cent.

The next largest year-over-year changes were increases of 11.6 per cent in the private transportation index and 11.5 per cent in the household operation index. Both these index changes reflect higher costs for petroleum products.

Major price changes during June included an increase of more than nine per cent for fresh produce. The average price of restaurant meals went up by 2.1 per cent.

Fuel oil prices rose by an average 3.2 per cent in June and gasoline prices by 4.5 per cent.

The food index grew by 1.2 per cent in June and there was a similar increase in the housing index. The transportation index was up by 1.9 per cent.

The consumer price index is based on a 1967 survey of family spending patterns and weights of major component indexes are: Food, 25 per cent; housing, 31 per cent; clothing, 11 per cent; transportation, 15 per cent; and other items, 18 per cent.

The increase in produce price in June more than offset declines in prices of beef, pork and eggs. Sugar prices rose by an average 3.5 per cent and prices of many products containing sugar also went up.

Home ownership costs went up by 1.3 per cent as purchase prices, mortgage rates and repair costs were higher. Rents were 1.1 per cent higher.

Appliance prices were up by an average 2.3 per cent and furniture prices 1.2 per cent.

Aussies Strand Sinatra, 'Goon Squad'

SINATRA
. . . God-given?

SYDNEY (UPI) — A wave of union indignation at Frank Sinatra and his bodyguards, who manhandled two men and a woman reporter whom he called a $1.50 hooker, brought cancellation of his comeback tour today — then stranded him in Australia.

Sinatra was scheduled for a five-concert, $135,000-a-night tour but bowed to union pressure and cancelled his second performance in Australia after his guards beat up the two men and the woman in Melbourne.

Shortly after Sinatra blasted the press as a bunch of bums and women reporters as hookers and broads before a sellout audience of 6,200 at Melbourne's Festival Hall Tuesday, three unions told him to "pack his bags and get out of Australia."

They included the technicians who would have helped stage his performances.

Television cameramen David Hill and Mike Mehan and newswoman Hilary Sexton were cut about the face in a violent scuffle at Sinatra's Melbourne hotel when they tried to photograph him in a corridor. Jim Oram of The Daily Mirror said Sinatra's "goon squads" blocked the way and then attacked the newsmen.

The bruised newsmen said they were seeking legal advice on the incident.

The scuffle broke out after a previous incident at the concert hall where Sinatra made a 20-yard dash past newsmen with grunts of "get out of my way."

Transport union workers refused to load gas in Sinatra's private jet, the hotel workers union at the Southern Cross Hotel in Melbourne refused to serve food and drink in the suite he shared with Mrs. Barbara Marx, wife of Zeppo, of the Marx brothers, and his team of 17 friends, labelled by newspapers as "The Goon Squad".

Sinatra demanded today that the press apologise to him, but Jim North, secretary of the New South Wales division of the Australian Journalists Association, said:

"If Sinatra doesn't apologise to the media I will call on 114 affiliated unions and ask them to blackball Sinatra unless he apologizes for calling our women journalists whores."

Australians also were angered at Sinatra's easy way with customs. It takes an average of 30 minutes to get through customs but Sinantra did it the easy way when he arrived Sunday from Tokyo on a Qantas 747. He passed through in a matter of seconds and then raced into town at high speed in a white Rolls-Royce with little regard to the speed laws.

"Who the hell does this man Sinatra think he is?" asked Neville Wran, leader of the Labor Opposition in the New South Wales Parliament.

All But One Mill Closed

All but one of the pulp and paper mills on Vancouver Island were shut down today as spreading labor strife threatened to bring the forest products industry through most of B.C. to a halt.

About 1,000 men were off the job at the Crofton mill near Duncan and another 1,100 walked out at Harmac near Nanaimo. All told, about 6,400 mill workers are out at seven Island and coast mills.

The mill shutdowns — except at Port Alberni where about 1,200 men are still at work — brings two more unions along with the International Woodworkers of America into open conflict with the forest products companies.

They are the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada and the United Paperworkers of Canada, both dissatisfied with proposed mid-contract wage revisions.

In Victoria, an all-night bargaining session involving Labor Minister Bill King failed to produce any agreement between the IWA and Forest Industrial Relations, bargaining agent for 120 companies.

Talks were expected to resume sometime later today but there was no indication of when or where.

In the IWA dispute over a new contract, half of 32,000 coast loggers and millworkers remain off the job, most of them on Vancouver Island. Major operations in Greater Victoria continue except Sooke Forest Products.

Among other pulp and paper mills shut today:

William's Mark-Up: $77,000

Nineteen months after he bought a house in Victoria's exclusive Rockland district for $60,000, Resources Minister Robert Williams has it on the market for $137,000.

Advertised by Block Bros. which has listed it since the end of June, the property at 1737 Rockland Avenue is described in the newspaper advertisement as "one of Victoria's official heritage homes" set in "large, secluded grounds."

The Rattenbury-designed home has five bedrooms, three bathrooms and seven fireplaces, the ad says, and a conservatory adjoins the "entertainment-sized living room."

In the garden there is the foundation for a tennis court, as well as an orchard. The lot is 97 by 300 feet.

The realtor's adjure "no drive-bys" and give no indication of address or owner.

But the accompanying photograph shows the rear of premises at 1737 Rockland, which according to Land Registry records was bought by "Robert Arthur Williams, Minister of Lands and Forests, and Lea Marie Yvonne Williams, homemaker" Nov. 22, 1973 (about three months after the NDP came to power).

Purchase price is given as $60,000.

Williams was not available for comment on the matter today. Several months ago, he indicated he was planning to move to the Victoria West area where he and his family could enjoy more of a warm neighborhood atmosphere.

PCs, NDP Eye New Leaders

Times News Services

OTTAWA — As Progressive Conservative officials absorbed the shock of the federal election results, they hastened to deny that Robert Stanfield's leadership is in jeopardy.

But despite denials, the future leadership of both the Conservative and New Democratic parties is being discussed by party members.

Both Stanfield and David Lewis have refused to make snap decisions on whether to resign.

Stanfield said he would discuss the leadership issue with the party caucus and party officials. He indicated it would be some weeks, if not months, before he decided.

MP Stu Leggatt, one of the two NDP members who retained their seats, was mentioned as a possible successor Tuesday in a survey of opinions on Lewis' position.

Tommy Douglas, re-elected in Nanaimo, Cowichan and the Islands and the only other New Democratic MP left in B.C., proposed three candidates Tuesday to succeed David Lewis as federal party leader:

—Ed Broadbent, re-elected in Oshawa-Whitby, and currently chairman of the NDP caucus.

—Lorne Nystrom, re-elected in Saskatchewan's Yorkton-Melville riding.

Douglas, a former NDP federal leader himself, rejected a suggestion that he take over from Lewis as party leader until a convention can be held.

"Although we have been greatly reduced in numbers, we still have some outstanding young men to take over when Mr. Lewis decides what we wants to do," Douglas said.

Like several other New Democrat MPs and former MPs, he appeared to favor the leadership chances of Broadbent and ruled out the likelihood of Lewis either continuing much longer as leader or of Lewis seeking a seat in Parliament through a byelection.

His most probable option, Douglas said, is to ask the party caucus to elect a temporary House leader and then to call a leadership convention at a convenient time.

Meanwhile Stanfield slipped quietly into the capital Tuesday afternoon unnoticed by the public and virtually ignored by his own supporters.

Only a handful of officials from Conservative headquarters and Grenville-Carleton MP Walter Baker went to the airport to meet the leader on his return from his home riding in Halifax where he received the news of his resounding defeat at the polls Monday.

Community Centre Okayed for City

Victoria is among five centres in B.C. to receive government approval for the first combined community health and human resources centres.

The government said operating costs for the first year will total $1.5 to $2 million for all five programs.

The Victoria centre will be in James Bay and that program is already in the final stages of planning, ready for operation by the fall.

The other centres are being established in the Queen Charlotte Islands, Houston, Granisle and Grand Forks-Boundary.

The centres will provide for locally-planned, controlled and operated health and social service programs.

About 80 per cent of the costs are already funded by the province through existing programs which will be incorporated into the new centres, and capital costs will be the major new expense in the first year of operation.

Personnel and programs will be housed in existing or temporary facilities until new buildings are available.

SUMMER FESTIVAL OPENS TONIGHT

Rain or shine, the Victoria Summer Festival opens tonight.

Featured throughout the season of sunset promenade programs will be Victoria Symphony Orchestra and guest artists conducted by Laszlo Gati.

Official opening ceremonies for the Victoria Summer Festival will be held at 7 p.m., followed by a second concert with a different program at 7:15.

If it rains the events will take place at the same times in Christ Church Cathedral on Quadra Street.

The concerts will continue through Aug. 9 on Monday, Wednesday and Friday in Heritage Court and will be accompanied by other special attractions.

Each evening at 8:30 there will be film showings in nearby Newcombe Auditorium. The films are strongly British Columbia oriented. Tonight visitors will see Island Eden and Mountains to the Sea.

There will also be a photographic exhibition in the Heritage Court complex, and in the Provincial Archives Building an art exhibition dealing with landscape.

Exhibitors are all from Vancouver Island and are headed by Royal Canadian Academicians Maxwell Bates, Don Harvey, Flemming Jorgensen and Herbert Siebner.

Others have in many cases received Canada Council grants, had one-man shows and exhibited in important shows across the country.

All events are free to the public.

It's Cats That Made 'Em Great!

by PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

What made the British navy great?

It wasn't its Nelsons or its ships of Oak.

It was the elderly spinsters and their love of cats.

This was one of the contentions Tuesday in Saanich cat lovers' running battle with council to quash what they consider unfair legislation against felines.

A delegation appeared before the finance, legislative and health committee, backed by a thick sheaf of eloquent letters, all protesting a section in a bylaw that authorizes poundkeepers to pick up any cat found wandering without its owner.

It was one of these letters that traced the history of the British navy.

Crediting the theory to evolutionist Charles Darwin, the writer described the cycle this way:

—Bumble bees were more abundant near towns and villages. This was because cats helped keep down the field mice, which eat honeycombs and larvae.

—It was the cats kept by spinsters in towns and villages that helped keep the field mice down.

—Because of this red clover prospered. The cattle fed on it. The navy fed on the cattle.

"It was, in fact, the British spinster who kept the navy great," the writer claimed.

Criticism from cat lovers at the last council meeting caused aldermen to table the legislation. It was tabled again Tuesday.

The cat lovers contend the legislation, if passed, would be illegal, contravening the Criminal Act which forbids any person from depriving another of a pet.

Mayor Ed Lum said the

NEWS BRIEFS

Docker Pay: $16,640

NEW YORK (AP) Dockworkers in the Port of New York will receive guaranteed annual wages of $16,640 or $320 a week, by the final year of a new three-year contract agreed upon by negotiators.

The longshoremen are currently guaranteed $12,688 for 2,080 hours of pay a year, or $244 a week.

'Scrap the BBC'

LONDON (UPI) — A committee of the governing Labor Party today recommended government economic intervention in the press and abolition of the British Broadcasting Corp. and centralization of all broadcasting in a "public broadcasting commission."

U.S. 'Threatening'

CARACAS (UPI) — Panama accused the United States today of creating a "constant threat to peace and security" by holding on to the Panama Canal.

Cable Car Crash

TORONTO (CP) — Two women professors at the University of Toronto, Helen Floruk and Irena Bienkowski, were killed Tuesday in Bergen, Norway, when a cable car in which they were riding crashed down a mountainside.

CUSO Man Shot

Floods Kill 20

MORELIA, Mexico (UPI) — Authorities said today at least 20 persons died and hundreds were left homeless when torrential rains engulfed several villages in the Mexican state of Michoacan.

N-Test Shakes Nevada

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — A weapons related atomic device was detonated today at the Nevada test site, causing high buildings here 90 miles away to sway from what a CalTech seismology expert said was "a pretty good blast."

The Atomic Energy Commission would say only that the device was in the 20 to 200 kiloton range. CalTech said it measured 5.5 on the Richter scale.

The Soviet Union apparently also carried out an underground nuclear test explosion today, officials at the Norsar Seismological Observatory in Norway said.

Provincial Aid Called a Must In Merger Plan

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Colwood and Langford would probably be in favor of municipal status "if the pot is sweet enough," Langford regional director Earl Pallister said today.

With indications from Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer that there will be some sort of municipality formed in Colwood, Langford and View Royal within a year, both Pallister and Colwood director Dick Emery said they were in favor of the amalgamation, but only if the provincial government picks up part of the tab.

"We've had years of neglect out here and it must be corrected before we can start organizing," Pallister said.

"We have to find out exactly what the government is going to do for us.

"We're not going to just pick up the bill for services we don't have yet."

The question of amalgamation in the sprawling outlying areas has been around for almost 10 years, with residents violently opposed to any forced municipal status.

In 1969, a vote of 93 per cent against amalgamation in Colwood, and 88 per cent against in Langford, turned then Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell away from any such move.

But since then the area has grown — without plans, without controls, leaving the region open to poor development and booming land speculation.

Now the feeling of residents is probably in favor of an amalagamation that would bring some sort of order to an area that has got out of hand, Pallister indicated.

"Before the government was just saying, 'There's the open door, go ahead and get out on your own.' That kind of thing was really quite unfair."

In a meeting Tuesday with regional officials, Lorimer promised that some of the financial burden that would accompany municipal status would be picked up by the provincial government.

"The government has to come across with financial assistance," Emery said.

The government can either continue paying for existing government services, such as road maintenance and policing, or provide the cash for the fledgling municipality to keep up the service.

Lorimer didn't promise that there would be a referendum held on the question, but Pallister and Emery are keeping their fingers crossed that residents will have a say about their future.

Most officials in the area feel that the View Royal district would be "more logically" united with Esquimalt except Esquimalt and View Royal.

"There is opposition in Esquimalt to having us with them and we don't want to go in with Colwood-Langford.

"We just want to be left alone to form our own township or municipality."

If View Royal were amalgamated with Esquimalt, it would have to be brought up to that municipality's standards in such things as street lights, sidewalks, parks and sewers, Massey said.

"If we're incorporated, our taxes will go up and people are going to want to see some extra services right away," she said.

View Royal has "a whole different character" than Colwood and Langford, Massey said, and residents don't want to be lumped in with an area that is going through such tremendous growing pains.

View Royal Ratepayers' Association president Tony Miller said that given the choice of Esquimalt or Colwood, residents would choose Esquimalt.

"But if we're given three choices, we'll stay on our own."

Miller suggested yet another alternative, "that is very logical from an engineering service and maintenance view" — all of View Royal north of the Island Highway could amalgamate with Saanich and the rest could go with Esquimalt.

Another meeting with Lorimer is planned for later this month to discuss the details of financial assistance for the areas.

Former Jailer Jailed 30 Days For $10 Theft

A former jailer with Victoria city police department was sentenced to 30 days in jail and fined $200 Tuesday for stealing a $10 bill from a prisoner last March.

Albert Julian Wilson, 59, of 1007 Esquimalt, a 30-year veteran of the force and jailer for eight-and-a-half years, had pleaded guilty in provincial court June 21.

The charge stemmed from an incident March 1 when a $10 bill planted on a man jailed on a drunk charge was later recovered in Wilson's effects. Police did not say why or how the money was planted.

Judge Fred Green, who had postponed sentencing for presentence and psychiatric reports, called the theft a breach of trust which had brought discredit to the police department.

"Such an act cannot be condoned," he said. "A police officer occupies a special position. The public looks to him for safety and protection."

Green rejected an appeal by defence lawyer Dermond Owen-Flood for a discharge.

"It would be contrary to the public interest to do so," he said.

Wilson joined the force in 1944 and was 18 months from retirement. He was suspended when the charge was laid and resigned shortly after.

Green, citing testimony from defence witnesses, said the accused had been unhappy with his job as jailer and had repeatedly asked to be relieved.

Witnesses testified Wilson had undergone a personality change over the past year, becoming "nervous" and suffering depression, Green said.

"His behavior would be understandable perhaps because of a long-standing resentment of the police force," he said.

Owen-Flood had pointed out Wilson's career had been destroyed. He compared the case to one earlier this year in Ottawa where a senior police officer had been found guilty of shoplifting, yet was granted a conditional discharge.

Green said he had considered that case and cited four others involving police officers convicted of crimes.

Quoting judgments in those cases, he said "where a trusted public servant violates the trust given him, deterrence should be . . . the principle factor."

"While a police officer's job may be onerous and depressing at times, so are other occupations."

Green said Wilson's act "violated trust, brought discredit to the department, and abused the position of authority, power and control he had held."

"There may be mitigating circumstances but the fact is a police officer committed theft."

Inmates Ready Jamboree Camp

3,600 Boy Scouts Expected

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

When 3,600 boy scouts set up their tents at Camp Barnard near Sooke, Aug. 1, a group of William Head prison inmates will feel a small glow of pride.

They should. If it weren't for the inmates, Camp Barnard might not have been ready in time for the 10-day B.C.-Yukon Boy Scout Jamboree, second ever held in B.C.

Since late 1973 eight or nine-man crews from William Head have been putting in eight-hour days at the campsite, clearing the area, making trails, clearing a beach for swimming, fixing up buildings.

"These fellows did a fantastic job," said Bob Muir, director of the scout camp.

Muir has been preparing for the jamboree since last August and has found it a "great undertaking."

The jamboree is turning out to be much bigger than anyone anticipated, he said. Originally 2,500 boys were expected, but a last-minute flood of applications sent the number up to 3,600.

With scout leaders, that will put more than 4,000 campers at Camp Barnard, which had an original capacity of 180.

Add to that a staff of 500 to 600 to man the camp's 10-bed hospital, its canteen, bank, post office, and other services, and you've got a small city.

Muir said the inmates have been so enthusiastic some have asked to help out during the jamboree, but William Head acting director John Sheridan said that would be "very, very doubtful."

The inmates work on a temporary day parole at the camp, and for many it's their first venture into the community again, he said. It's been a good training ground to accustom them to an eight-hour work day, Sheridan added.

The jamboree, first since one held in Penticton in 1966, will draw boys from across B.C. Contingents are also coming from other provinces, the United States and even Scotland.

One of Canada's Eskimo scout troops will also be attending, Muir said.

Called the Jamboree of Challenge, the event will offer boys canoeing, archery, sailing, horseback riding, mountaineering, log burling and many other activities to try.

Venturers — older scouts aged 14 to 18 — will go on an overnight survival trek. Younger boys will be given tours of the Dockyard, Legislative Buildings and other sights.

The Phoenix Rover Scouts, a Victoria group of mentally retarded boys, will be helping out with the massive job of sorting rations in the food distribution centre.

Each troop of eight scouts will pick up its rations at the centre to cook by themselves.

Muir said naturalists like Freeman King have been consulted in preparing the jamboree site to make sure the ecology isn't damaged.

"We're not removing trees," he said.

He said he was a "little concerned" about the numbers of visitors which would probably flood into the camp each day. The Penticton jamboree had 30,000 visitors, he said.

The jamboree will be open to the public each day from 2 to 9 p.m.

"This will be the first chance for many of these boys to go to jamboree," Muir said. From Victoria 285 boys will attend, and there's a waiting list of several hundred scouts from all over B.C.

Cost to each boy for the 10-day stay is $60.

Tow Trucker Rescues Car With Splash

Garry Martin usually drives up to cars he has to tow away — but today he swam.

Martin, 26, a driver for Victoria Super Service Towing, had to swim 20 feet in Beacon Hill Park's Goodacre Lake to attach a chain to a nearly-submerged car.

The chain attached, Martin swam back to shore, got in his truck and started to pull out the car.

A chain was also used to link the other truck to a tree to prevent that truck from slipping.

The car is owned by Edward MacDonald, 1518 Dallas, who told police it had been stolen some time after 11 p.m. Tuesday.

Second Woodward's Store Starts at Mayfair Mall

The building is being constructed on the parking lot north of the present store. In addition, a three-tier parking lot is being constructed to add 300 spaces to the present parking capacity of 1,300 cars.

Pat Rice, manager of Mayfair Shopping Centre, said the Woodward's project is expected to be completed by year's end and other expansion at the shopping centre will be finished by July, 1975.

Total cost of the Mayfair expansion is $4 million. In addition to the second Woodward's store, the expansion involves enclosing and air-conditioning the mall and constructing 10 new stores.

The present Woodward's store will be expanded about 12 feet towards Douglas Street to enlarge the food floor.

The first stage of the project involves ripping up concrete at the north end parking lot in preparation for pile driving for the parkade and the second Woodward's store. The store will handle low-priced items.

Q. Have any books been written about pianist Oscar Levant? T.B.

A. The Public Library lists no books on Levant, but he has written three autobiographies: A Smattering of Ignorance (Doubleday, 1959), Memoirs of an Amnesiac (Putnam's, 1965) and The Unimportance of Being Oscar (Putnam's, 1968). The last one is still in print.

NIGHT CLERK ROBBED BY ROCK-WIELDING BOY

A night clerk in the Craigflower Motel was hit over the head with a rock late Tuesday just before a juvenile fled with about $50 in small bills.

Esquimalt police said the clerk, Byrne Currie, was uninjured.

The juvenile, described as a boy between 14 and 16, took the money from the office of the motel at 101 Island Highway while Currie was not looking.

Currie was hit when he turned to look at the boy.

City School Board Feels 'Hog-Tied'

Education Minister Eileen Dailly has supplied $21 million to put more teachers into B.C. schools this fall, but she's not providing money to build more classrooms to put them in.

That point sparked anger and frustration from trustees and administrators at a Greater Victoria school board committee meeting Tuesday.

"Your administration is finding itself in great difficulties," schools superintendent Jake Longmore told the board. "Your administration feels hog-tied in this whole situation."

Longmore said the education department has refused to allow the board to buy six portable classrooms to handle an overflow student population at Gordon Head elementary school in September. Portables from five other schools will have to be moved to Gordon Head, he said.

The refusal is because the department is using a 32-students-to-one-teacher ratio in determining when new classrooms are needed in the district.

The school board, like Dailly, has committed itself to bringing down the student-teacher ratio — to around 28-to-one this fall.

The board feels it needs more classrooms to put these smaller classes into. The education department, by its 32-to-one ratio, says Victoria district has plenty of classroom space.

"This bureaucracy is more restrictive and bureaucratic than anything we've seen in the last 10 years," board chairman Peter Bunn charged.

Bunn said that if the problem wasn't cleared up by September the board should send down a delegation to "raise bloody murder about this thing."

"The hypocrisy of (Dailly) telling the people through paid advertisements that they are dedicated to lowering the pupil-teacher ratio," when they refuse to allow more classrooms to be built, said Trustee Walter Donald.

Les Canty, the department's administration superintendent, said the 32-to-one ratio for new classrooms wont be changed "until we see what form this improved student-teacher ratio will take."

Mozambique Rebels Take Fight-Talk Stance

By PETER YOUNGHUSBAND

CAPETOWN (WP) — Hopes of the new liberal Portuguese provisional government under President Antonio de Spinola for a speedy end to the guerrilla war in Mozambique seem to be crumbling.

In spite of earnest efforts by the Spinola government to come to terms with the rebels and grant Mozambique its independence by democratic procedures, the Front for the Liberation of Mozambique (Frelimo) has intensified its attacks — and in one area they struck daily last month, according to army communiques.

A communique issued by the Portuguese military high command in Mozambique over the weekend said that in spite of all the efforts being made there had not been a cease fire in Mozambique and the armed forces therefore "continued to co-operate in the protection of the population attacked by Frelimo guerrillas."

Frelimo no longer had any reason to carry on fighting, as the armed forces — in which there has a majority of Mozambique citizens — were committed to uphold democratic freedoms, the communique said.

Referring to operations by the Frelimo guerrillas, the communique recounts that in June, 18 members of the security forces, 45 Frelimo men and 36 African civilians lost their lives and 27 security members of the security forces, four Frelimo and 48 African civilians were injured. In addition, 321 tribes people had been abducted.

Frelimo had attacked 32 "defenceless villages," laid 10 ambushes and were involved in 19 armed robberies.

The high command added that the desire for peace was one of the fundamental points of the armed forces movement responsible for the April 25 Lisbon coup, and that the provisional government had opened talks with "the movement that started the war against the government toppled by the armed forces" in the sincere intention of achieving peace."

However, it is widely believed among political observers in Africa that the attacks are designed to strengthen Frelimo's position with Portugal at the bargaining table.

It has all become an unhappy situation for President de Spinola. Success for his provisional government depended very much on a swift decolonization program for Portugal's three African territories — Mozambique, Angola and Guinea-Bissau.

In the case of Angola and Guinea-Bissau the outlook seems better. While talks have proceeded with the liberation organization responsible for insurrection in those colonies, the fighting has subsided significantly.

In Mozambique, however, the more aggressive Frelimo fighters are demanding independence on their own terms which even some radical African politicians privately concede are hardly democratic.

At talks early last month in Lusaka, Zambia the new Portuguese Communist foreign minister, Antonio Soares explained to Frelimo leader Samora Machel and his aides that having just released Portugal from a fascist dictatorship, the new provisional government first wished to restore constituional government to Portugal with free elections and then follow the same program for the African territories.

Independence would be granted to each of the basis of free elections — in which Frelimo could (in the case of Mozambique) compete as a political party.

This was rejected by the Frelimo leaders. Machel told newsmen afterwards: "We have not fought this liberation war for 13 years to then have to take our chance as a political party in a general election."

President de Spinola, due to visit Mozambique and Angola this month, has had to postpone his trip due to the worsening security situation in Mozambique as well as growing tensions in his own cabinet in Lisbon.

Meanwhile white settlers' fears of the mounting terror campaign by Frelimo and the army's apparent failure to contain it have blossomed into the larger fear of what might happen to the 270,000 whites under an independent black government in a country of 10 million Africans.

This has triggered off a secret white right-wing settler terrorist movement — similar to the Algerian settler backlash 10 years ago — and there have already been a number of attacks on white liberals in Lourenco Marques, capital of Mozambique.

An attempt was made on the life of a Liberal lawyer, the wife of another lawyer was beaten up and a newspaperman of known liberal views was attacked and badly beaten. Bomb and machine gun attacks have been made on the premises of persons sympathetic to Frelimo.

The Portuguese army has moved in troop reinforcements — as well as a further 30 fighter planes — to build up military strength. But for reasons best known to themselves Portuguese have also weakened their military position by pulling back garrisons and outposts close to the Tanzanian border across which the guerrillas are raiding. The guerrillas have now secured a virtual stranglehold on the vital supply lines by rail and Tete and the giant Cabora road to the northern region of Bassa hydro-electric project being constructed there.

Employable Singles Have Welfare Cut at Coquitlam

In adopting the motion, the council is following the lead of nearby Surrey, whose council voted in May to follow a policy it has set over the past few years and cut off all payments to employable adults between 19 and 35 who have no dependents.

Human Resources Minister Norman Levi has threatened to cut off provincial funds to Surrey's welfare program unless the payments are restored.

But Surrey Mayor Bill Vander Zalm has said the municipality will close its welfare department rather than give in to the threat.

Port Coquitlam Ald. Phil Ranger told Monday's council meeting he was not interested in how many persons would be affected or if any money would be saved.

"We are trying to save people," he said. "It worked before. These people found jobs and did not come back to collect welfare when the time expired and they could have reapplied."

Housing Starts Slacken

CMHC said in a news release preliminary figures for June indicate housing starts in urban areas reached 19,361, down eight per cent from 20,946 in the same month a year ago. Starts in the first six months of the year were 90,849, about one per cent below the 92,222 total in the same period last year.

House production to the end of May had been running slightly ahead of last year's rate.

Some major builders, such as H. Keith Morley of Toronto, president of Richard Costain Canada Ltd., have predicted a sharp plunge in residential construction activity this year because of tight money conditions.

Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford has said he does not expect a significant decline in housing starts this year. He has stated the government still is meeting or surpassing the annual target of 250,000 units set by the Economic Council of Canada.

There were more than 268,000 housing starts last year and houses were being built in June at a rate which would work out to 250,000 a year, CMHC said.

Quebec City Ends Year With Big Deficit

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec City ended its 1973-74 fiscal year with a $3.7 million deficity, says Mayor Gilles Lamontagne.

This brings the city's total consolidated debt to $118.2 million, he added.

The mayor predicted earlier a deficit of $5.7 million, but a $1.5 million provincial grant this year and a new policy of returning 50 per cent of all meal and hotel taxes to the city helped keep the figure down, he said Monday.

Bus Crash Kills 22 in Pakistan

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (UPI) — Two buses, one bound for a religious shrine, collided and burst into flames near Multan in Punjab province Tuesday. Police said 22 persons burned to death and 24 others were injured.

50% LOSE DEPOSIT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nearly 50 per cent of the 110 federal candidates in British Columbia lost their $200 deposits Monday after failing to poll half as many votes as the winners in their ridings.

Among the 54 suffering $200 setbacks were 12 NDP candidates and one Liberal. All the Social Credit candidates, Communists, Marxist-Leninists and independents lost their deposits.

Throughout the country, the 16 candidates who ran for Communist or Marxist-Leninist parties all lost their deposits. It was the first time they ran as official party candidates.

Price Index Jump At 23-Year High

OTTAWA (CP) — A 1.3-per-cent increase during June in the consumer price index has pushed the index to its largest 12-month increase in 23 years, Statistics Canada reported today.

The June level was 11.4 per cent higher than it was in June, 1973. Not since the Korean War, when the index went up by 11.8 per cent between August, 1950, and August, 1951, has there been a larger 12-month increase.

Higher costs for food, transportation and housing accounted for a major share of the June increase.

During the last two months the consumer price index has gone up by three per cent as prices of food and petroleum products have climbed sharply higher.

In June the largest contributors to the gain in the index were higher prices for fresh produce, restaurant meals, fuel oil for homes and gasoline for cars.

Compared with a year ago, the largest price increases were for food. The index for restaurant meals was up by 20.7 per cent and for food eaten at home 16.7 per cent.

The next largest year-over-year changes were increases of 11.6 per cent in the private transportation index and 11.5 per cent in the household operation index. Both these index changes reflect higher costs for petroleum products.

Major price changes during June included an increase of more than nine per cent for fresh produce. The average price of restaurant meals went up by 2.1 per cent.

Fuel oil prices rose by an average 3.2 per cent in June and gasoline prices by 4.5 per cent.

The food index grew by 1.2 per cent in June and there was a similar increase in the housing index. The transportation index was up by 1.9 per cent.

The consumer price index is based on a 1967 survey of family spending patterns and weights of major component indexes are: Food, 25 per cent; housing, 31 per cent; clothing, 11 per cent; transportation, 15 per cent; and other items, 18 per cent.

The increase in produce price in June more than offset declines in prices of beef, pork and eggs. Sugar prices rose by an average 3.5 per cent and prices of many products containing sugar also went up.

Home ownership costs went up by 1.3 per cent as purchase prices, mortgage rates and repair costs were higher. Rents were 1.1 per cent higher.

Appliance prices were up by an average 2.3 per cent and furniture prices 1.2 per cent.

Aussies Strand Sinatra, 'Goon Squad'

SINATRA
. . . God-given?

SYDNEY (UPI) — A wave of union indignation at Frank Sinatra and his bodyguards who manhandled two men and a woman reporter whom he called a $1.50 hooker, brought cancellation of his comeback tour today — then stranded him in Australia.

Sinatra was scheduled for a five-concert, $135,000-a-night tour but bowed to union pressure and cancelled his second performance in Australia after his guards beat up the two men and the woman in Melbourne.

Shortly after Sinatra blasted the press as a bunch of bums and women reporters as hookers and broads before a sellout audience of 6,200 at Melbourne's Festival Hall Tuesday, three unions told him to "pack his bags and get out of Australia."

They included the technicians who would have helped stage his performances.

Television cameramen David Hill and Mike Mehan and newswoman Hilary Sexton were cut about the face in a violent scuffle at Sinatra's Melbourne hotel when they tried to photograph him in a corridor. Jim Oram of The Daily Mirror said Sinatra's "goon squads" blocked the way and then attacked the newsmen.

The bruised newsmen said they were seeking legal advice on the incident.

The scuffle broke out after a previous incident at the concert hall where Sinatra made a 20-yard dash past newsmen with grunts of "get out of my way."

Transport union workers refused to load gas in Sinatra's private jet, the hotel workers union at the Southern Cross Hotel in Melbourne refused to serve food and drink in the suite he shared with Mrs. Barbara Marx, wife of Zeppo, of the Marx brothers, and his team of 17 friends, labelled by newspapers as "The Goon Squad".

Sinatra demanded today that the press apologise to him, but Jim North, secretary of the New South Wales division of the Australian Journalists Association, said:

"If Sinatra doesn't apologise to the media I will call on 114 affiliated unions and ask them to blackball Sinatra unless he apologizes for calling our women journalists whores."

Australians also were angered at Sinatra's easy way with customs. It takes an average of 30 minutes to get through customs but Sinantra did it the easy way when he arrived Sunday from Tokyo on a Qantas 747. He passed through in a matter of seconds and then raced into town at high speed in a white Rolls-Royce with little regard to the speed laws.

"Who the hell does this man Sinatra think he is?" asked Neville Wran, leader of the Labor Opposition in the New South Wales Parliament.

All But One Mill Closed

All but one of the pulp and paper mills on Vancouver Island were shut down today as spreading labor strife threatened to bring the forest products industry through most of B.C. to a halt.

About 1,000 men were off the job at the Crofton mill near Duncan and another 1,100 walked out at Harmac near Nanaimo. All told, about 6,400 mill workers are out at seven Island and coast mills.

The mill shutdowns — except at Port Alberni where about 1,200 men are still at work — brings two more unions along with the International Woodworkers of America into open conflict with the forest products companies.

They are the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada and the United Paperworkers of Canada, both dissatisfied with proposed mid-contract wage revisions.

In Victoria, an all-night bargaining session involving Labor Minister Bill King failed to produce any agreement between the IWA and Forest Industrial Relations, bargaining agent for 120 companies.

Talks were expected to resume sometime later today but there was no indication of where or when.

In the IWA dispute over a new contract, half of 32,000 coast loggers and millworkers remain off the job, most of them on Vancouver Island. Major operations in Greater Victoria continue except Sooke Forest Products.

Among other pulp and paper mills shut today:

William's Mark-Up: $77,000

Nineteen months after he bought a house in Victoria's exclusive Rockland district for $60,000, Resources Minister Robert Williams has it on the market for $137,000.

Advertised by Block Bros. which has listed it since the end of June, the property at 1737 Rockland Avenue is described in the newspaper advertisement as "one of Victoria's official heritage homes" set in "large, secluded grounds."

The Rattenbury-designed home has five bedrooms, three bathrooms and seven fireplaces, the ad says, and a conservatory adjoins the "entertainment-sized living room."

In the garden there is the foundation for a tennis court, as well as an orchard. The lot is 97 by 300 feet.

The realtors adjure "no drive-bys" and give no indication of address or owner.

But the accompanying photograph shows the rear of premises at 1737 Rockland, which according to Land Registry records was bought by "Robert Arthur Williams, Minister of Lands and Forests, and Lea Marie Yvonne Williams, homemaker" Nov. 22, 1972 (about three months after the NDP came to power).

Purchase price is given as $60,000.

Williams was not available for comment on the matter today. Several months ago, he indicated he was planning to move to the Victoria West area where he and his family could enjoy more of a warm neighborhood atmosphere.

PCs, NDP Eye New Leaders

Times News Services

OTTAWA — As Progressive Conservative officials absorbed the shock of the federal election results, they hastened to deny that Robert Stanfield's leadership is in jeopardy.

But despite denials, the future leadership of both the Conservative and New Democratic parties is being discussed by party members.

Both Stanfield and David Lewis have refused to make snap decisions on whether to resign.

Stanfield said he would discuss the leadership issue with the party caucus and party officials. He indicated it would be some weeks, if not months, before he decided.

MP Stu Leggatt, one of the two NDP members who retained their seats, was mentioned as a possible successor Tuesday in a survey of opinions on Lewis' position.

Tommy Douglas, re-elected in Nanaimo, Cowichan and the Islands and the only other New Democratic MP left in B.C., proposed three candidates Tuesday to succeed David Lewis as federal party leader:

—Ed Broadbent, re-elected in Oshawa-Whitby, and currently chairman of the NDP caucus.

—Lorne Nystrom, re-elected in Saskatchewan's Yorkton-Melville riding.

Douglas, a former NDP federal leader himself, rejected a suggestion that he take over from Lewis as party leader until a convention can be held.

"Although we have been greatly reduced in numbers, we still have some outstanding young men to take over when Mr. Lewis decides what we wants to do," Douglas said.

Like several other New Democrat MPs and former MPs, he appeared to favor the leadership chances of Broadbent and ruled out the likelihood of Lewis either continuing much longer as leader or of Lewis seeking a seat in Parliament through a byelection.

His most probable option, Douglas said, is to ask the party caucus to elect a temporary House leader and then to call a leadership convention at a convenient time.

Meanwhile Stanfield slipped quietly into the capital Tuesday afternoon unnoticed by the public and virtually ignored by his own supporters.

Only a handful of officials from Conservative headquarters and Grenville-Carleton MP Walter Baker went to the airport to meet the leader on his return from his home riding in Halifax where he received the news of his resounding defeat at the polls Monday.

Community Centre Okayed for City

Victoria is among five centres in B.C. to receive government approval for the first combined community health and human resources centres.

The government said operating costs for the first year will total $1.5 to $2 million for all five programs.

The Victoria centre will be in James Bay and that program is already in the final stages of planning, ready for operation by the fall.

The other centres are being established in the Queen Charlotte Islands, Houston, Granisle and Grand Forks-Boundary.

The centres will provide for locally-planned, controlled and operated health and social service programs.

About 80 per cent of the costs are already funded by the province through existing programs which will be incorporated into the new centres, and capital costs will be the major new expense in the first year of operation.

Personnel and programs will be housed in existing or temporary facilities until new buildings are available.

Docker Pay: $16,640

NEW YORK (AP) Dockworkers in the Port of New York will receive guaranteed annual wages of $16,640 or $320 a week, by the final year of a new three-year contract agreed upon by negotiators.

The longshoremen are currently guaranteed $12,688 for 2,080 hours of pay a year, or $244 a week.

'Scrap the BBC'

LONDON (UPI)— A committee of the governing Labor Party today recommended government economic intervention in the press and abolition of the British Broadcasting Corp. and centralization of all broadcasting in a "public broadcasting commission."

U.S. 'Threatening'

CARACAS (UPI) — Panama accused the United States today of creating a "constant threat to peace and security" by holding on to the Panama Canal.

Cable Car Crash

TORONTO (CP) — Two women professors at the University of Toronto, Helen Floruk and Irena Bienkowski, were killed Tuesday in Bergen, Norway, when a cable car in which they were riding crashed down a mountainside.

N-Test Shakes Nevada

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — A weapons related atomic device was detonated today at the Nevada test site, causing high buildings here 90 miles away to sway from what a CalTech seismology expert said was "a pretty good blast."

The Atomic Energy Commission would say only that the device was in the 20 to 200 kiloton range. CalTech said it measured 5.5 on the Richter scale.

The Soviet Union apparently also carried out an underground nuclear test explosion today, officials at the Norsar Seismological Observatory in Norway said.

WEDNESDAY FOOD DAY

Starting with today's Times every Wednesday will be food day in the Family Section — with gourmet and standard recipes from Beastall, Moore and Claiborne; food preparation and storage ideas; insights into nutrition, and data on availability and cost. There'll also be room for original home-cooked dishes submitted by Times readers. See Page 25, Third Section.

SUMMER FESTIVAL OPENS TONIGHT

Rain or shine, the Victoria Summer Festival opens tonight.

Featured throughout the season of sunset promenade programs will be Victoria Symphony Orchestra and guest artists conducted by Laszlo Gati.

Official opening ceremonies for the Victoria Summer Festival will be held at 7 p.m., followed by a second concert with a different program at 7:15.

If it rains the events will take place at the same times in Christ Church Cathedral on Quadra Street.

The concerts will continue through Aug. 9 on Monday, Wednesday and Friday in Heritage Court and will be accompanied by other special attractions.

Each evening at 8:30 there will be film showings in nearby Newcombe Auditorium. The films are strongly British Columbia oriented. Tonight visitors will see Island Eden and Mountains to the Sea.

There will also be a photographic exhibition in the Heritage Court complex, and in the Provincial Archives Building an art exhibition dealing with landscape.

Exhibitors are all from Vancouver Island and are headed by Royal Canadian Academicians Maxwell Bates, Don Harvey, Flemming Jorgensen and Herbert Siebner.

Others have in many cases received Canada Council grants, had one-man shows and exhibited in important shows across the country.

All events are free to the public.

It's Cats That Made 'Em Great!

by PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

What made the British navy great?

It wasn't its Nelsons or its ships of Oak.

It was the elderly spinsters and their love of cats.

This was one of the contentions Tuesday in Saanich cat lovers' running battle with council to quash what they consider unfair legislation against felines.

A delegation appeared before the finance, legislative and health committee, backed by a thick sheaf of eloquent letters, all protesting a section in a bylaw that authorizes poundkeepers to pick up any cat found wandering without its owner.

It was one of these letters that traced the history of the British navy.

Crediting the theory to evolutionist Charles Darwin, the writer described the cycle this way:

—Bumble bees were more abundant near towns and villages. This was because cats helped keep down the field mice, which eat honeycombs and larvae.

—It was the cats kept by spinsters in towns and villages that helped keep the field mice down.

—Because of this red clover prospered. The cattle fed on it. The navy fed on the cattle.

"It was, in fact, the British spinster who kept the navy great," the writer claimed.

The cat lovers contend the legislation, if passed, would be illegal, contravening the Criminal Act which forbids any person from depriving another of a pet.

Mayor Ed Lum said the
